HISTORY OF SEVENTY-EIGHTH INFANTRY.

This Regiment was organized at Quincy, Ill., and mustered into service September 1, 1862.

Company A was recruited in Schuyler county; Company B in Adams; Company C in McDonough; Company D in Hancock; Companies E, F and G in Adams; Company H in Hancock; Company I in McDonough; and Company K in Adams county.

September 19, 1862, the Regiment was ordered to Louisville, Ky., and was provost guard for a few days in that city, while Buell was equipping his army after his celebrated race with Bragg. October 5, the Regiment was marched to Shephardsville, Ky., and on the 14th was divided into detachments, under the command of Brigadier General C. C. Gilbert, to guard railroad bridges on the L. & N. Railroad and the Lebanon Branch, from Elizabethtown, Ky., to New Haven, Ky., with Regimental headquarters at the latter place. At these points the Regiment constructed rifle pits and stockades for protection.

December 26, 1862, the guerrilla John Morgan captured Companies B and C, at Muldraughs Hill, two and one-half miles from Elizabethtown, and paroled them. They were under fire from nine pieces of artillery some two hours. These companies were sent to St. Louis, Mo., and were not exchanged until October, 1863, when they joined the command at Stringers Ridge, Chattanooga, Tenn. John Morgan, in the same raid, on the morning of December 30, attacked Regimental Headquarters at New Haven, after his demand for surrender had been declined, but his efforts were not very vigorous, and he retired.

Company H, the only company at New Haven, suffered no casualty, but it was supposed that Morgan's command did, as they were exposed to the fire from the stockade. About the last of January, 1863, the command was collected at Louisville, and embarked on steamboats for Nashville via Cumberland River, arriving at Fort Donelson February 3, 1863, in time to relieve the Eighty-third Illinois, who were surrounded by a largely superior force under Forrest and Wheeler. The enemy had made a number of assaults, but had been repulsed with great loss. They retired on the approach of the transports, and the command proceeded on to Nashville, Tenn., where the Regiment disembarked. On coming up the river the federal steamboats made a very imposing appearance. The Regiment was in the command of Brigadier General C. C. Gilbert, in the Army of Kentucky, under Major General Gordon Granger.

February 12, the Regiment marched to Franklin, Tenn., where it remained four months. At this place it was diligent in company, battalion and brigade drill, the first good opportunity it had enjoyed for such exercise. On March 4, 1863, General Gilbert sent out quite a force from Franklin under Colonel Coburn, and it was met by Van Dorn and Wheeler and routed, and a great number of Coburn's men captured. The Seventy-eighth with the Brigade was in line of battle in reserve, and met with no loss.

April 11, the command was threatened by a heavy force under Van Dorn and Wheeler, but no general engagement occurred, simply the outposts and pickets skirmished with the enemy, and on June 4, the enemy made a similar attack on the outposts with like results.

On June 9, 1863, a very unhappy affair occurred. Two Confederate spies entered the camp disguised as Federal officers. They gave their names as Colonel Orton and Lieutenant Peters. They were fortunately detected as spies and they admitted they were Confederate officers, but denied being spies. A court martial was immediately organized and they were tried and condemned to death; they died like brave men. The Seventy-eighth constructed the gallows and furnished the chaplain and escort.

On June 23, 1863, marched to Triune and Murfreesboro, Tenn. The troops had now been reorganized and the Seventy-eighth was assigned to the Brigade of Colonel John G. Mitchell in General James B. Steadman's Division, Reserve Corps, under Major General

Gordon Granger. Mitchell's Brigade was composed of the One Hundred and Thirteenth, One Hundred and Twenty-first, and Ninety-eighth Ohio, and Seventy-eighth Illinois. We were glad to exchange General Gilbert for Colonel Mitchell, who ably commanded the Brigade from this time, with the exception of a few months, to the end of the war. The feeling existing between the above named regiments was exceedingly friendly and fraternal. On June 28, 1863, moved south from Murfreesboro in the rear of the general advance against Bragg's army. The Brigade entered Shelbyville, Tenn., July 1, and encamped. While at this place Colonel W. H. Benneson resigned, and Lieutenant Colonel Carter Van Vleck was promoted. September, 6, 1863, the Brigade moved southward, crossing the Tennessee River September 12, pursuing its march around Lookout Mountain, and arrived at Rossville, Ga., about September 14, 1863, and for the few days previous to the battle of Chickamauga was kept on the move day and night, marching, skirmishing, etc., all the signs of an approaching general engagement being visible. On the 17th of September, the Division made a reconnoissance to Ringold, Ga., and there discovered that Longstreet's corps from Lee's army was re-enforcing Bragg. The command was followed closely on its return from Ringgold, and at midnight the enemy opened upon us with artillery with no damage but an extremely disagreeable reveille.

During the commencement of the battle of Chickamauga the Regiment lay with the Division before Rossville, guarding the road through the gap to Chattanooga. Before noon on the 20th of September, General Steadman, apprehending that General Thomas needed assistance, double quicked Mitchell's and Whitaker's Brigade, to the front. This proved to be very timely assistance to General Thomas, as Longstreet was getting around the Federal right and rear. These two Brigades were put into action immediately and made a charge on Longstreet's corps and drove them from the hill with great loss on both sides, and maintained their position until after dark, though the enemy made repeated assaults. At length when darkness had put a stop to the deadly work, the command retired in an orderly manner to Rossville. The Seventy-eighth lost very heavily in killed and wounded, being about 40 per cent. of the number engaged, with eight officers out of twenty. VanHorne, in his history of the Army of the Cumberland, says: "The opportune aid of these two Brigades (Mitchell's and Whitaker's) saved the army from defeat and rout."

On the 21st of September, the Seventy-eighth Regiment remained in line of battle on the ridge at Rossville Gap, holding the rear. The morning of the 22d it fell back to Chattanooga, and then crossed over the Tennessee River to the north side and camped with the Brigade on Stringer's Ridge, protecting the rear from that quarter. When the Regiment left Rossville on the morning of September 22, pickets were left in front of the enemy with the understanding that they would be relieved later on, but by the blunder of a staff officer the pickets were not relieved, and hence were captured and sent to Southern prisons, where twenty-four of them died. The Seventy-eighth lost by this capture four officers, Captain Hawkins, Lieutenants Hovey, Morse and Irwin, and fifty-one men from Companies I and F, who were on picket duty. Those who survived the cruelties of Andersonville and other prisons were not exchanged until May and June, 1865, being prisoners almost two years.

Bragg's Army surrounded and besieged the Federal Army at Chattanooga, and the troops were put on half rations.

In the early part of October the Brigade went over into the Sequatchie Valley to help pursue Wheeler, who was destroying supply trains. October 9, 1863, Mitchell's Brigade was put into Brigadier General Jefferson C. Davis' Division, and was called Second Brigade, Second Division, Fourteenth Army Corps. On the morning of October 27 the Regiment, with the Brigade, crossed the Tennessee River below Lookout Mountain, on a pontoon bridge, to the assistance of the Potomac troops, who were coming to the support of the Army of the Cumberland, and the enemy was trying to prevent their advance by assaulting General Gray's Division. This battle is known as the battle of Wauhatchie.

On November 24 the command broke camp at Stringer's Ridge, and crossed the Tennessee River on pontoons at the north end of Missionary Ridge, the Division being for the time attached to the Fifteenth Army Corps, and lay in reserve while the Fifteenth Army Corps assaulted the Ridge. On the afternoon of November 25, 1863, Missionary Ridge was carried in the center, but too late for pursuit.

Early on the morning of the 26th the Second Division pursued the enemy, and before noon reached Bragg's depot of supplies, Chickamauga Station, in time to see it destroyed by fire. At dark overtook the enemy and had a sharp skirmish with them. November 29 started to the relief of Burnside, at Knoxville. December 5, at Marysville, learned that Longstreet had raised the seige, and December 7 counter-marched, and returned to Chattanooga, arriving December 17, and encamped December 26 with the Brigade at Rossville, where the Regiment went into winter quarters. The march towards Knoxville was a very severe one, as the men were poorly prepared for it. having just emerged from the battle of Missionary Ridge, and many being without shoes or proper clothing. They were also without rations, and were obliged to subsist on the country, which had been already nearly devastated, and hence many suffered from hunger as well as exposure. But these ills were endured without murmur, and General Sherman complimented Davis' Division on it good order and behavior on this march.

The Regiment remained at Rossville until the commencement of the Atlanta campaign, in May, 1864, drilling and doing out-post duty, and occasionally making a reconnoissance. January 28 and 29, and February 24, found the Regiment on such a march, in the vicinity of Ringold and Dalton, finding the enemy in force behind their works.

February 9, the Regiment encamped for about two weeks at Tyner's Station, and on April 11 was detached, and made a reconnoissance to Lafayette, Ala.

While at Rossville, in winter and spring of 1864, the Brigade was augmented by the addition of the Thirty-fourth Illinois and One Hundred and Eighth Ohio.

On May 2, 1864, the Atlanta campaign commenced. The enemy were forced into their works at Buzzard's Roost and Dalton, where they presented a defiant front. They were flanked out of Dalton, and May 13 finds the Regiment in line of battle in front of Resaca, where the command was engaged, with a slight loss, and during the night of the 15th the enemy evacuated Resaca The Division then proceeded to Rome, Ga., and on the 17th drove back their cavalry, with some loss, and forced the enemy into their fortifications. The next morning the enemy abandoned the city. The Regiment left Rome the 24th, and marched toward Dallas, and drove the rebel pickets through Burnt Hickory. The enemy was strongly entrenched at New Hope Church, and constant and heavy skirmishing occurred on both sides, There were now some twenty days occupied in throwing up earthworks and skirmishing with the enemy, until June 27, when Sherman determined to make a grand assault on Kenesaw. The Brigade, with the others, were massed in the rear of the rebel entrenchments, and at about 9 A. M. the command jumped the works on a charge to capture the enemy's entrenchments. The Brigade was received with a rattling fire of both musketry and artillery, which was deadly. The assault was a failure, as the obstructions in front of the works were very difficult to penetrate, but the Brigade maintained a position within 75 or 100 feet of the enemy, and that night the command entrenched itself. The loss in the charge was very great. A day or so after, by common consent, hostilities ceased, and details from each side buried the dead between the lines.

On the morning of July 4, it was discovered that the enemy had abandoned their entrenchments the night before, and the pursuit was immediately commenced, skirmishing with them constantly, and on July 17 we crossed the Chattahoochie River, and at Peach Tree Creek had quite an engagement, with some casualties in the Seventy-eighth Illinois. After heavy skirmishing pushed the rebels into their Atlanta entrenchments.

July 28, the command was ordered to assist General Howard, and we kept moving to the right around Atlanta, skirmishing, fighting and building works until August 25.

Brigadier General Jas. D. Morgan, August 22, assumed the command of the Second Division, and remained in command until the muster-out.

August 23, Colonel Carter Van Vleck died from wounds received in front of Atlanta. He was much beloved by the entire Regiment, and was sincerely mourned.

August 28, abandoned the works in front of Atlanta and struck south, skirmishing with the enemy as usual. On September 1, assaulted the enemy's entrenchments at Jonesboro, Ga., and after a desperate resistance, mounted their works, capturing men, cannon and battle flags, performing a feat that was not often equaled on either side during the war. The Regiment did not lose more men than at Kenesaw, but the result was more gratifying.

Atlanta was evacuated on the 2d of September, 1864, and the Regiment encamped in the outskirts on the 8th.

On the Atlanta campaign the Regiment was hardly out of the sound of guns any day during the entire period from the 2d of May to the fall of Atlanta, and casualties were of almost daily occurrence. The Regiment must have lost, in killed and wounded, two hundred men, from May 2 to September 1, 1864.

September 29, 1864, the Regiment and Division were moved by rail to Athens, Ala., and then marched to Florence in pursuit of Forrest, who was in the rear with a large force doing great damage. The command had a skirmish with the enemy and drove him across the Tennessee River at Florence.

Returned to Athens and Chattanooga, and then marched through Gaylesville, Rome and Kingston to Atlanta. The grand march to the sea commenced November 16, when the command moved from Atlanta after the city was burned, advancing through Covington upon Milledgeville, arriving there about November 23.

About November 26, 1864, passed through Sandersville, and thence to Louisville and on to Savannah. About fifteen miles from Savannah were confronted by earthworks and artillery, and on December 10, 1864, the enemy retired into their entrenchments at Savannah, Ga , and the investment of the city was completed.

On December 21, 1864, the enemy abandoned the city, but we skirmished with them more or less before the evacuation.

The Regiment broke camp about January 20, 1865, at Savannah, and marched northward into the Carolinas, crossing the Savannah River February 5, 1865, at Sister's Ferry, and advanced through Barnwell and Lexington, and passed to the left of Columbia. February 17 proceeded on to Winnsboro, and arrived there February 21, the troops in their march destroying railroads and other property of value to the enemy.

On March 9 the Brigade arrived on the field in time to help Kilpatrick regain his camp from Hampton. March 11 reached Fayetteville, N. C., skirmishing with Hampton's Cavalry.

The march through South Carolina could be easily traced, for it was a track of desolation. The Regiment proceeded in a northeasterly direction toward Averysboro, and at this point the enemy made the first positive resistance since leaving Savannah, and on March 16 had quite a lively engavement, with some loss. On the morning of March 19, near Bentonville, N. C., found the enemy in force across the line of march.

The Brigade formed line, and the Seventy-eighth was put out as skirmishers, which soon developed a heavy rebel force, which completely surrounded our Brigade, and we had to fight both front and rear. The enemy was repulsed several times, and soon our entire Division was engaged. The enemy did not fall back until other troops came to the assistance of the Division.

The issue of this action was decided by the stubborn resistance of the Second Division. The loss in the Bentonville fight was heavy. On the 21st, in a skirmish, Lieutenant Summers was killed, and he was probably the last man in the Regiment who met his death by the fate of war. After the Bentonville fight the Regiment advanced to Goldsboro, and encamped. April 10, advanced toward Raleigh, and remained there until Johnson surrendered, which occurred April 26, and the war was over.

After the surrender, marched north through Richmond, Va., arriving at Washington, D. C., May 19, and participating in the Grand Review May 24, 1865.

June 7, was mustered out and sent to Chicago, where the Seventy-eighth Illinois was paid off June 12, 1865.

The Regiment participated in the battles of Chickamauga, Mission Ridge, Buzzard's Roost, Resaca, Rome, New Hope Church, Kenesaw Mountain, Peach Tree Creek, Atlanta, Jonesboro, Averysboro and Bentonville.

It is estimated that the Regiment lost about four hundred men, killed and wounded,—about ninety-six killed on the field, twenty-four died in rebel prisons; and seventy-seven in hospitals, from wounds and disease.

On September 1, 1862, enlisted men mustered in	862
Recruits	140
June 7, 1865, mustered out	393

The following officers were killed, or died from wounds: Colonel Carter Van Vleck, Atlanta, August 23, 1864; Major William L. Broddus, Chickamauga, September 20, 1863; Captain Robert M. Black, Jonesboro, September 1, 1864; First Lieutenant Tobias E. Butler, wounds received at Chickamauga, May 29, 1864; First Lieutenant George A. Brown, wounds received in action at Kenesaw, died June 30, 1864; First Lieutenant Daniel W. Long, Jonesboro, September 1, 1864; First Lieutenant George T. Beers, Bentonville, March 19, 1865; First Lieutenant William E. Summers, Bentonville, March 21, 1865; Second Lieutenant John E. James, Kenesaw, June 27, 1864.

The above completes the history of as good a regiment as Illinois ever sent to the field; and the men of this command can claim the proud distinction, at the battle of Jonesboro, Ga., of being represented by a regiment that achieved the only successful assault on entrenchments made in the Atlanta campaign by either side.

HISTORY OF EIGHTIETH INFANTRY.

The Eightieth Infantry Illinois Volunteers was organized at Centralia, Ill., in August, 1862, by Colonel T. G. Allen, and mustered into United States' service August 25, 1862.

Ordered to Louisville, September 4, and was assigned to the Thirty-third Brigade, Tenth Division, Army of the Ohio, Brigadier General Terrell commanding Brigade; Brigadier General Jackson commanding Division, and Brigadier General McCook commanding Corps.

October 1, under General Buell, marched in pursuit of Bragg, and, passing through Taylorville, Bloomfield and Mackville, was engaged in the battle of Perryville, October 8, losing 14 killed and 58 wounded, including Lieutenant Von Kemmel killed. Lieutenant Andrews mortally wounded, and Lieutenant Colonel Rodgers and Lieutenant Pace severely wounded. Generals Terrell and Jackson were also killed.

October 12, moved through Danville, Lebanon and New Market, to Mumfordsville. October 31 and November 26, made two marches to Cave City and returned. November 30, moved, via Glasgow and Hartsville, to Bledsoe Creek. December 26, started in pursuit of John Morgan, marching via Scottsville and Glasgow, to Bear Wallow, arriving December 31.

January 2, 1863, having discontinued the pursuit of John Morgan, marched to Cave City, Bowling Green and Nashville, Tenn., January 8, and Murfreesboro, January 10.

Was assigned to the Fourteenth Army Corps, General J. J. Reynolds' Division.

March 20, the Brigade of 1,500 men and two pieces of artillery, while on a scout, was attacked by John Morgan and 5,000 of the enemy; but they were repulsed, with heavy loss.

April 7, moved to Nashville, and was assigned to Brigade of Colonel A. D. Streight, Fifty-first Indiana Volunteers. Brigade, consisting of Fifty-first and Seventy-third Indiana, Third Ohio, Eightieth Illinois, and two companies of Tennessee cavalry, with two mountain howitzers, embarked, moving down the Cumberland and up the Tennessee rivers, and landed at Eastport, Miss., April 19.

Marched to Tuscumbia, where the regiment was mounted, April 26, moved from Tuscumbia. Were attacked at Dug's Gap and Sand Mountain, but, on both occasions repulsed the enemy, and, at Sand Mountain, captured a battery of two guns. Loss in the regiment, two killed and sixteen wounded. Captain E. R. Jones killed, Adjutant J. C. Jones mortally wounded, and Lieutenant Pavey severely wounded.

At Blunt's farm, May 2, again defeated the enemy, and, May 3, was surrendered to a vastly superior force, under General Forrest, who, contrary to stipulation, stole its blankets, watches and money. We were taken to Rome, and paroled and sent in coal cars to Atlanta. From this place the officers were sent to Libby prison. The enlisted men were sent, via Knoxville, Tenn., and Lynchburg, Va., to Richmond, arriving May 13, and thence to City Point, arriving at Annapolis May 17. On the 19th, moved to Camp Chase, O.

On June 28, having been declared exchanged, moved to St. Louis. On 29th, moved to Nashville, Tenn., Lieutenant Herman Steinecke taking command of the regiment, Colonel T. G. Allen having resigned and Lieutenant Colonel A. F. Rodgers and Major E. N. Bates being prisoners of war.

September 8, moved to Stevenson, Ala., Captain Cunningham taking command. October 16, moved to Battle Creek, Tenn. 23d, marched to Bridgeport and reported to General Howard, commanding Eleventh Army Corps. Was assigned to Third Brigade, Colonel Hecker, Third Division, General Carl Shurz. On 27th, moved up Lookout Valley, and was present at the battle of Wauhatchie.

November 24 and 25, was engaged in the battle of Mission Ridge.

On the 29th, commenced March to Knoxville, Tenn.. reaching Louisville, 14 miles from Knoxville, December 5. Longstreet having retreated, the command returned, arriving at Lookout Valley December 17. This march was made without wagons, tents or baggage, and rations were foraged from the country. The command suffered from want of clothing and shoes.

On the 24th of December, was assigned to Third Brigade, Colonel William Grose, Thirty sixth Indiana; First Division, General D. S. Stanley; Fourth Corps, Major General Gordon Granger commanding.

January 27, 1864, moved from Whiteside, via Chattanooga and Cleveland, to Charleston, Tenn., and thence to Blue Springs.

May 3, 1864, commenced the Atlanta Campaign. Participated in the battles of Dalton, Resaca, Adairsville, Cassville, Dallas, Pine Mountain, Kenesaw Mountain, Marietta, Peach Tree Creek, Atlanta, Jonesboro and Lovejoy Station. During the campaign, the regiment captured about 150 prisoners, and lost 25 killed and 60 wounded.

Camped at Atlanta, September 9. Marched, October 3, in pursuit of Hood, to Allatoona, and via Kingston, to Rome; thence to Galesville, Ala.; thence, via Alpine, Fayette and Rossville to Chattanooga, arriving October 30. Moved to Athens, Ala., and to Pulaski, Tenn. 23d of November, commenced falling back to Nashville.

December 15 and 16, participated in the battle of Nashville, and captured a three gun battery and 100 prisoners. January 5, arrived at Huntsville, Ala. 7th, Major E. N. Bates, having returned, assumed command.

March 12, moved to Knoxville, Tenn.; thence to Bull's Gap and Shield's Mill, March 28. Moved to Greenville, April 1, and from thence returned to Nashville.

June 10, 1865, mustered out of service, and proceeded to Camp Butler, Ill., for final pay and discharge.

Only four of the captured officers ever returned to the regiment. The remainder being held as prisoners until March 1, 1865, when they were paroled for exchange.

The Eightieth has traveled 6,000 miles, and has been in over twenty battles.

HISTORY OF EIGHTY-FIRST INFANTRY.

The Eighty-first Illinois Infantry Volunteers was recruited principally from the counties of Perry, Franklin, Williamson, Jackson, Union, Pulaski and Alexander, in the southern portion of Illinois, in what has, from the early history of the State, been known as "Egypt." Was mustered into the service of the United States at Anna, Union county, August 26, 1862, with the following field and staff officers: James J. Dollins, of Benton, Franklin Co., as Colonel: Franklin Campbell, of DuQuoin, Ill., Lieutenant Colonel; Andrew W. Rogers, of Carbondale, Jackson Co., Major; Zebedee Hammock, of Pinckneyville, Perry Co., Adjutant, and Logan H. Roots, of Tamaroa, Perry Co., as Quartermaster; L. Dyer, Surgeon; Isaac M. Neely, First Assistant Surgeon; Abel Campbell, Second Assistant Surgeon; W. S. Post, Chaplain, and a full Regiment of enlisted men. Immediately after the organization of the Regiment, it was ordered to Cairo, then on 8th of October to join the Army in the field under General Grant in Tennessee, the first duty being to do garrison duty at Humboldt, Tenn., Nov. 1, 1862. The Regiment moved with the Army from Lagrange, Tenn., southward, traversing the country as far south as Abbeyville, Miss., when the unfortunate raid of General Van Dorn, in our rear, capturing Holly Springs, December 21, 1862, and destroying millions of supplies, caused the retreat of the command to Memphis, Tenn., arriving at that point January 19, 1863. From this point the campaign against Vicksburg, that resulted in surrender, was begun February 20, 1863. The winter of 1862-3, is looked upon as the gloomiest period of the war, when the Copperheads and the Knights of the Golden Circle and other enemies of the Government were the most active, resulting in greater desertion from the ranks than ever before or since that time. On February 23, the command arrived at Lake Providence, remaining there until April 17, when the command moved to Milliken's Bend, 20 miles above Vicksburg. On the 21st, a call for volunteers was made to run the Vicksburg and Grand Gulf Batteries with (7) seven common transports, loaded with supplies for the Army. On the success of this undertaking depended the success of the campaign against the rear of Vicksburg.

From the Eighty-first Illinois Infantry, Captain George W. Sisney, Co. G, privates George W. Winfield, Co. G, Edward Hoxsey, Co. K, Uriah Butler, William T. Green, Eli J. Lewis and Frank Mayo, all of Co. I, were accepted. Many volunteered who were not accepted. Captain George W. Sisney was assigned the command of the transport "Horizon" and carried her through safely, but in a disabled condition. One boat, the "Tigress," was sunk before passing the Grand Gulf Batteries. The Regiment crossed the Mississippi River at Bruinsburg below Grand Gulf, May 1, and marched 20 miles, to Port Gibson, by 2 p. m., and participated in that battle, as a portion of the Third Brigade, Third Division, Seventeenth Army Corps, the Division commanded by Major General John A. Logan, the Corps by Major General James B. McPherson. The Regiment participated in the battle of Port Gibson, May 1, Raymond, May 12, and the capture of Jackson, the State Capital, May 14, and Champion Hill, May 16, at Black River Bridge, May 17. On the 19th the active work of investing the city of Vicksburg began. On the night of the 20th, the Regiment took the position occupied during the siege, just south of the Jackson road. On the 22d, the Regiment participated in the general assault on the enemy's works. Was repulsed, with the loss of 11 killed and 96 wounded, including Colonel J. J. Dollins, Lieutenants Hugh Warnock, Co. A, and James M. Farmer, Co. G, killed. C. S. Ward, Captain Co. D, died of wounds June 15. Zebedee Hammock, Adjutant, died of wounds May 29, and A. L. Lippincott died November 3. The loss of Colonel Dollins was deeply felt by the Regiment. He was brave to a fault, chivalrous, a strict disciplinarian in battle, one of the coolest and most collected soldiers ever in command of a regiment. Lieutenant Colonel

Campbell succeeded to the command of the Regiment as Colonel, Major Rogers to be Lieutenant Colonel, and Thomas Hightower, Captain Co. B, as Major, and Private James J. Fitzgerald, Co. H, to be Adjutant. The promotions took place during the seige. The Regiment participated in its seige duties until July 4, 1864, when the Third Division (Logan's) was assigned the post of honor in occupation and garrisoning of the city.

August 21 the Regiment received orders to participate in the Washita, La., campaign, under the command of Brigadier General John D. Stephenson. The expedition resulted in much good, with small loss.

October 16 the Regiment participated in the engagement at Brownsville, Miss., leaving an expedition, sent out from Vicksburg to Canton and Brownsville, to destroy all the property belonging to the enemy, possible.

January 10, 1864, the Regiment participated in an expedition up the river from Vicksburg to Greenville, Miss., returning with small loss.

The Regiment left Vicksburg March 9, 1864, to participate in the Red River campaign, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel A. W. Rogers, who proved himself to be an able regimental commander, the column numbering about 10,000 troops, under the command of Major General A. J. Smith. Of that number six regiments belonged to the Seventeenth Army Corps, with one Division under General Jo Mower, belonging to the Sixteenth Army Corps.

The Regiment participated in the capture of Fort De Russey and Alexandria before the arrival of the army from New Orleans, commanded by Major General N. P. Banks. The advance on Shreveport, La , began April 2, the six regiments belonging to the Seventeenth Army Corps guarding the transport fleet convoyed by the gun-boats. The fleet met with determined opposition on their way up the river.

On the 8th of April Banks' Army met with defeat at Mansfield, to be redeemed by the command of General A. J. Smith at Pleasant Hill on the 9th, resulting, however, in the retreat of the army to Grand Ecore.

On the 10th the fleet received orders to retreat. On its way down the river, meeting with the most determined resistance from numerous batteries planted on the river banks and from clouds of infantry and cavalry sharpshooters, making one continuous series of engagements until the 13th when the fleet returned to Grand Ecore. The Regiment met with considerable loss.

On the 20th the army moved in retreat, arriving at Alexandria on the 26th. The Regiment formed a part of the command, covering the retreat of the army from this point to the mouth of the Red River, participating in the daily series of skirmishes amounting to the dignity of battles, as at Coulterville, Marksville Prairie, Cain River, Atchafalaya Bayou, arriving at the mouth of the Red River May 21, arriving at Vicksburg May 24.

From Vicksburg the Regiment was ordered to Memphis, Tenn., and participated in the expedition to and battle of Guntown, Miss., June 10, 1864. The Eighty-first and Ninety-fifth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, being the only regiments belonging to the Red River expedition participating in this expedition, commanded by General Sturgis, who proved himself to be a thoroughly incompetent commander. The Eight-first was the first Infantry Regiment to open fire, and continued under fire from 11 a. m. until dark, resisting charge after charge of the enemy, forming the last line of battle some two miles in the rear of the first line, closing the bloody drama with a loss of 9 killed, 18 wounded and 126 prisoners, out of a total of 371 men. Of the number captured, six were line officers, who, while prisoners of war, were placed under the fire of the Union batteries at Charleston, S. C. The enlisted men were sent to Andersonville prison. The true history of the sufferings of our comrades in Andersonville prison can never be written. The mind of man can not convey to tongue or pen a language sufficient to portray the realization of the sufferings of the 30,000 Union soldiers who gave up their lives, or the survivors of that terrible imprisonment. No brighter page adorns the pages of the history of heroic soldiers than the heroism shown by our comrades who, while starving to death by inches, refused the daily offer of health and liberty by simply taking the oath of allegiance to the Confederacy. In every case the offer was rejected by members of Eighty-first.

August 3, 1864, the Regiment was ordered to Duvall's Bluff, Ark., and participated in a number of expeditions and skirmishes from that point throughout the state, until September 17, when the Regiment broke camp, and marched with the command, under the command of General Jo. Mower, in pursuit of General Price, on his last raid into Missouri. The pursuit was made to Cape Girardeau, Mo., thence by boat to St. Louis, and to Jefferson City by boat, and by rail and marches to Warrensburg, Mo., arriving at that point October 25, remaining until November 8, when General Price having escaped into Arkansas, the Regiment returned to St. Louis, Mo., and from that point was ordered to Nashville, Tenn., under the command of General A. J. Smith, participating in the battle of Nashville and the utter defeat and rout of the Confederate army, December 15 and 16, 1864. The Regiment joined in the pursuit of Hood's army to Eastport, Tenn., and to Corinth, Miss. Upon the arrival of the Regiment at St. Louis, the Adjutant, J. J. Fitzgerrell, was ordered to Springfield, Ill., to bring up recruits for the Regiment. The Regiment being ordered to Nashville in the meantime, he missed the Regiment at Cairo, on its passage up the Ohio. Taking the first boat loaded with supplies for Nashville, Tenn., the "Thomas E. Tutt," he proceeded up the river, until at Cumberland City, just below Nashville, the boat was captured by the command of General Lyons, who crossed the river and raided on the communications of General Thomas. The prisoners captured were paroled and sent to Fort Donelson under flag of truce, from there to Pawl Camp, at Benton Barracks, Mo., by order of Major General Dana. Colonel Robert Buchannan, Seventh Missouri, Adjutant J. J. Fitzgerrell, Lieutenant Jacob B. King, First Lieutenant Company C, and six enlisted men from the Eighty-first, were captured at the same time, who remained in Pawl Camp until exchanged at the close of the war.

The Regiment was ordered from Eastport, Tenn., to Mobile Ala., via New Orleans and Mexico, and held the advance in the investment of the Spanish fort and opened the fight March 27, 1865, and continued under fire from that date until the close of the siege, April 8, when the works were captured by a charge, the Eighty-first being the second Regiment inside the enemy's works, capturing 83 prisoners, losing 6 killed and 14 wounded.

After the fall of Mobile, the Regiment was ordered to Montgomery, Ala., where the Third Brigade, consisting of One Hundred and Twenty-fourth, One Hundred and Eighth, Eighty-first Illinois, and Eighth Iowa, were assigned the position of army post duty in recognition of efficient services in the siege, remaining there until ordered home, via Meridian and Vicksburg, Miss., leaving Vicksburg July 31, 1865, going direct to Chicago for final payment and muster-out August 5, 1865.

There were mustered into the Eighty-first, enlisted men, a total of 1,144; of that number there were 54 killed or died of wounds received in battle, 287 died of disease, 274 resigned or were discharged, and 529 mustered out of service.

Now that twenty-one years have passed since the Regiment broke ranks at muster-out, each member of the Regiment feels that his Regiment made a glorious record, for unflinching courage, and bravery in battle, much of which was due to the stern discipline of the duty of the soldier, drilled into the raw undisciplined citizen by Colonel J. J. Dollins, whose fall was lamented by the Regiment, and the undaunted courage of Lieutenant Colonel A. W. Rogers, who commanded the Regiment the greater portion of the time after the siege of Vicksburg.

To speak of the soldierly qualities of any particular officer and soldier would be making, perhaps, invidious distinctions where all alike did their duty, in the fullest sense of the term.

Be it said to the honor of citizen soldiers, the members of this Regiment have since conducted themselves as good citizens, many of them occupying prominent stations in life.

HISTORY OF EIGHTY-SECOND INFANTRY.

The Eighty-second Infantry, named Second Hecker Regiment, in honor of Colonel Frederick Hecker, its first colonel, and formerly colonel of the Twenty-fourth Illinois Infantry Volunteers, was, like the latter, almost exclusively composed of German members and a Chicago organization.

One company, (Company C, the Concordia Guards) was an Israelitish company. (The Israelites of Chicago collecting, within three days, $10,000 among themselves for its benefit.)

Company I was composed of Scandinavians.

The Regiment was organized at Camp Butler, Springfield, Ill., September 26, 1862, and was mustered into the United States service at the same place, October 23, 1862.

On November 3, 1862, the Eighty-second left Camp Butler, one thousand strong, under orders to join the Army of the Potomac. It arrived at Arlington Heights, November 9, was attached to General Franz Siegel's Corps, and marched to Fairfax court house, November 19. On December 11, it moved to Stafford court house, where it was assigned to the First Brigade (Colonel Schimmelfennig), Third Division (General Carl Schurz), Eleventh Army Corps, and, with that command, went into camp near Acquia Creek, Va., December 19, where the Regiment remained until January 20, 1863, a part of the Corps only participating in Burnside's attack on the heights of Fredericksburg. On January 20, a forward movement of the army was ordered, which was commenced, but abandoned on the 23d, a severe storm having rendered the roads absolutely impassable. Wagons, ambulances, batteries, caissons, were mired in every gully, almost beyond the possibility of extrication, and the troops returned to winter quarters as speedily as possible.

In this movement, which was known as the "Mud Campaign," the Eighty-second participated, advancing to Hartford Church, where it encamped until February 6, and then moved again to Stafford court house. With Howard's command, the Eighty-second moved from Stafford court house, April 27, and marched towards Chancellorsville and arrived at Kelly's Ford on the Rappahannock; it crossed on the evening of the 28th, and, after a few hours' rest on the southern side, moved to the Rapidan River, near Germania Ford, crossing that ford to Locust Grove, and forming line of battle along the Fredericksburg pike on the morning of the 30th. On the morning of May 1, small rifle-pits were dug and barricades made. At noon May 2, the Regiment was placed in position, facing south, in the second line of battle, with the One Hundred and Fifty-seventh New York. About five o'clock, the enemy attacked the First Division, holding the right, routed and drove it to the rear, attacking the first line of the Third Division, which, after brave resistance, gave way. The second line, comprising the Eighty-second Illinois and the New York regiment, held the enemy in check until a new line was formed in their rear, when it fell back about fifteen yards, leaving seventy killed and wounded on the ground it had occupied. While forming and rallying his men, Colonel Hecker was wounded, and fell from his horse while riding to the rear. Major Rolshauson, in going to his aid, was also wounded, when the Regiment retired in good order. The loss of the Eighty-second, before it re-joined the Brigade, was one hundred and fifty-six killed or wounded, including seven commissioned officers.

The Eighty-second participated in the engagement on May 4, and then returned to camp at Stafford court house, where it had a much needed rest until June 12, when it moved on the Gettysburg campaign. Before it quite reached Gettysburg, General Reynolds was killed, but his brave and sorely pressed Divisions still held their position near the Theological Seminary, above the town. At noon, General Howard arrived on the field, and assumed command of the troops, the immediate command of the Eleventh Corps devolving on Carl Schurz. This Corps was thrown into position to the right of the first, and received, soon after, the weight of the first attack of Ewell's fresh troops, which forced it back to the village of Gettysburg, where the officers, to save their men from the terrible fire through the main streets, attempted to march them diagonally by crossing streets through the town, the attempt resulting in confusion, degenerating into a panic.

General Howard instantly selected Cemetery Hill, south of Gettysburg, as his line of defense, to which point the troops were withdrawn and re-formed, the First Brigade of the Third Division acting as rear guard—the Eighty-second Illinois guarding the rear of the Brigade in the retreat to the new position. The Eleventh Corps, in the line of battle of the following days, held the center—the crest of Cemetery Hill and the declivity in its front.

The Third Division occupied the right of Howard's line, joining Slocum's Twelfth Corps on their left. Toward evening, on Thursday, the 2d of July, Ewell's Confederate Corps, by a sudden rush on our right, carried a portion of the line of rifle pits which had been constructed during the day, in front of Slocum's and Schurz's line, and which were protected by only a single Brigade—the right having been weakened to support Sickles, on the left, against the terrific assault of Longstreet's forces. On Friday morning the battle raged in the woods in front of Schurz. The rebels were still in the rifle-pits, and the infantry were fighting them where our gunners could give no aid, for fear of killing friend as well as foe. From early morning until past eleven—seven hours—the men fought to regain those rifle-pits, when Ewell's Corps was finally repulsed, and the Union line advanced to its former position.

Colonel Salomon, with the Eighty-second, made a charge upon the pits in his front, driving the Confederates back with the loss of more prisoners than the number of his commaud. During the three days' fighting, Colonel Salomon had two horses shot under him, while leading his Regiment, which was especially complimented by Generals Howard and Schurz for its bravery and efficiency during the struggle. Its losses were 131 killed, wounded and missing. Captain Emil Frey and Lieutenant Eugene Hepp, Co. H, were taken prisoners.

The Eighty-second then joined in the pursuit of Lee, through Virginia, and then, on September 25, marched to Manassas Junction, en route for Tennessee.

On October 19, Colonel Hecker was assigned to the command of the Third Brigade, of Schurz's Division, and the Eighty-second Regiment was transferred to that Brigade.

On October 19, Hecker's Brigade was advanced to Russell's Gap, a gorge in the Raccoon Mountain, which it held and defended while Hooker's forces passed through the gap into Lookout Valley, and thence to Wauhatche, at the foot of Lookout Mountain, where they arrived October 28. On that night the Eighty-second had an engagement with Law's Division of Longstreet's Corps, and afterward joined the main army in Lookout Valley.

The Eighty-second, with the Eleventh Corps, remained in Lookout Valley until November 22, when it joined Grant's forces at Chattanooga, and participated, on the 23d, in the attack on the enemy, near Orchard Knob. On the 25th, Schurz's Division participated in the attack on Mission Ridge, and the following day reported to General Sherman, and took part in the pursuit of Bragg's forces.

The Eleventh Corps arrived at Cleveland, Tenn., November 29, and thence marched to Charleston, where orders were received to move to the relief of Burnside, at Knoxville. When this order was received, the troops under Sherman's command had no provisions nor a change of clothing; their shoes were almost worn out, and there was but a single blanket to a man, from Sherman down to the private. A march of 84 miles was before them.

The command reached Loudon December 2, and then marched to Marysville, where intelligence was received of Longstreet's retreat' and the Eleventh Corps was ordered to return to Athens, and thence to Charleston and Chattanooga. At Chattanooga the Corps was returned to Hooker's command, December 17, and again went into camp in Lookout Valley, moving to Whiteside, Tenn., in January, 1864. In the re-organization of the army by Sherman, for the Atlanta campaign, the Eleventh and Twelfths Corps of the Army of the Potomac were consolidated as the Twentieth Corps, Army of the Cumberland, under command of General Joseph Hooker.

General Hecker resigned March 4, 1864, and the Eighty-second, under Col. Salomon, was assigned to the Third Brigade (Colonel J. S. Robinson), First Division (General Alpheus S. Williams) Twentieth Corps. The Regiment left Whiteside on May 3, 1864, joining the Corps at Triune on the 7th, and marched by way of Snake Creek Gap to Resaca, arriving there on the 13th. On the afternoon of the 14th, the enemy attacked our left. The troops resisted for a few moments, then wavered, and finally fell back through the woods, and over the barricades, toward and beyond Major Simonson's famous Fifth Indiana Battery. A few stopped after passing the barricades to support the guns, but the Confederates charging the second time with terrible yells, the remnant of the Brigade were put to flight and nothing but Major Simonson with his six guns and his few brave men that manned them seemed to stand between the army and disaster. Just then a cheer was heard, and down the gorge came the Eighty-second Regiment on the double quick, and charging across the field, drove the enemy back to the woods, saved the battery and the left of the army. Every man of the Regiment won the highest praise for gallantry.

The Eighty-second occupied the field for the night, and on the following day was again engaged in an assault on the enemy's main line. On the morning of the 16th the Confederates retreated from their works, and before daylight evacuated Resaca and retreated across the Oostenaula River, the Regiment joining in the pursuit.

On May 25th, the Eighty-second with the First Division (General Williams), which was leading Hooker's column, became engaged with the enemy soon after crossing the bridge over Pumpkin Vine Creek, about half way between Burnt Hickory and Dallas. The First Division was brought into action, and was for some time exposed alone to the attack of the whole Confederate force, but gained and held the advanced ground above the enemy's main line at New Hope Church, until reinforcements arrived. For their action in this affair General Thomas publicly complimented the men on their bravery. Johnson's main line could not be carried, and on the 26th the troops threw up intrenchments, which they occupied until the Confederates under Johnson evacuated their works on June 6th. The loss of the Eighty-second Illinois on the 25th, in the advance toward Dallas, was eleven killed and sixty-nine wounded out of a total of two hundred and forty-five in the ranks. In the forward movement of Sherman's army, June 5th, the Eighty-second took part in the various skirmishes which finally dislodged the enemy from his position on Lost Mountain, west of Marietta.

On June 15th the Eighty-second participated in an assault on the enemy's main line of works, near Pine Mountain, there losing five killed; and again on the 17th it lost one killed and three wounded, in an attack on the enemy's intrenched position, south of Noses Creek.

By June 23d Hooker advanced toward Kenesaw, remaining there until July 3d when the Confederates having abandoned their works on Kenesaw Mountain, the First Division commenced the forward movement toward Chattahoochie River. In the Battle at Peach Tree Creek Williams' Division held the right of Hooker's line, Geary's held the center, and Butterfield's (commanded by General Ward) the left.

Robinson held the left of Williams' Division. The following account of the battle, particularly of that portion engaged in by Robinson's Brigade, is from the pen of an officer of the First Division, who participated in the engagement:

"On July 19th the Army of the Cumberland arrived in position south of the Chattahoochie and to the north of Atlanta.

"On the 20th instant a general advance in the direction of Atlanta was begun.

"The day wore away until two o'clock P. M. The developments anxiously hoped for in the movements of McPherson and Schofield seemed to be awaited as a signal for active demonstrations by the Army of the Cumberland. But, the enemy appreciating the desperate condition to which he was being rapidly brought, bethought himself to make one bold, dashing, determined effort to thwart our designs. Accordingly, early in the afternoon a fierce fire broke out along our picket lines. The storm soon extended along the line toward the right, where Williams' Division lay grouped along the crest of the rather high and densely-wooded hill. Between Williams' and Geary's divisions lay a deep hollow, down which, marked by the timber, the enemy was now advancing in heavy masses. General Williams saw, at a glance, the arrangement of his troops which was best adapted to meet this unlooked-for demonstration of the enemy. He hurried his Brigades into position, on the double-quick, and, although they moved with all possible celerity, was unable to get them into their proper positions ere they received a terrific fire from the enemy.

"Robinson's Brigade hastened along the crest of the hill, then, facing by the left flank, marched down the slope to receive the swarming masses of the over-confident foe. The fire of the enemy was so murderous, and his advance so impetuous, that it seemed for a time as if Robinson's line must surely yield. The combatants were mingled with each other and fighting hand to hand. The safety of the corps, and indeed, of the entire army, seemed to depend upon the courage and determination of those devoted men. Should they give way, the enemy would gain possession of the hill, command the rear, break the centre, capture hundreds of prisoners, our artillery, and drive the remnant of our troops back to the Creek, and, perhaps, to the Chattahoochie. But not one inch would those intrepid veterans yield. Though their ranks were fearfully thinned, and the tangled forest became strewn with bleeding forms as with autumn leaves, yet they determinedly maintained their position and compelled the enemy to withdraw, leaving his dead and wounded."

Another writer says:

"The rebel attack rolled toward the left until General Williams' fine Division was fully engaged. It had advanced to close up on Geary's, General Knipe's Brigade in the centre, General Ruger's on the right, and Colonel Robinson on the left. It fought until four o'clock, until long after dark, in a dense forest, without yielding a foot. When the enemy first advanced against Colonel Robinson's Brigade, the Rebels held up their hands, as if to surrender, upon which, seeing our lads hesitate, they instantly poured a volley into them. These wretchedly and cowardly tactics were practiced on other portions of the line."

The Eighty-second Illinois performed its part worthily with the rest, each man firing their one hundred and thirty to one hundred and forty rounds of ammunition during the three hours' engagement.

On the 22d, the Twentieth Corps moved to Atlanta, where the Eighty-second, with its Brigade, remained until the movement to Atlanta was commenced on the 27th. At this time the Twentieth Corps was commanded by General Williams. At the Chattahoochie, General H. W. Slocum joined and took command of the Division, which, on September 2nd, entered and occupied Atlanta.

Robinson's Brigade joined the Division and encamped near the city September 4th, having marched that day from Montgomery Ferry on the Chattahoochie. From September 12th until October 4th, the Eighty-second guarded Confederate prisoners, and was then employed on the defenses around Atlanta until the 15th, when it formed part of the extensive foraging expeditions. On the 15th of November, with the Third Brigade, (Colonel Robinson), First Division (General J. N. Jackson), Twentieth Corps (General A. S. Williams), Left Wing, Army of Georgia (General H. W. Slocum), the Eighty-second Illinois moved from Atlanta on the famous "March to the sea." The Brigade moved out by the Decatur road on the 16th, and was then assigned as rear guard of the Corps, and reached Milledgeville November 22d. It was then made advance guard of the Division and Corps, and moved to the defenses around Savannah. On the 28th the Regiment marched with the Army through South Carolina, reaching Chesterfield March 1st. On March 16th it was on the front line at Averysboro, being under fire from noon until dark, and loosing about fifteen men.

Again, on March 19th, at Bentonville, the Brigade was thrown to the front, and being flanked, fell back and re-formed about a quarter of a mile in the rear, throwing down a rail fence for a barricade. There it maintained its position, the enemy charging several times, and being repulsed with great loss. In this action the Eighty-second lost twenty-five men. On March 24, the command reached Goldsboro, where, after their march of sixty-five days, a permanent camp was formed, the men received new and much needed clothing, and revelled in the luxury of once again receiving full rations. On April 10, camp was broken, and the men arrived at Raleigh, North Carolina, on the 16th, when, after marching eighteen miles farther in pursuit of the Confederates, news was received of Johnson's surrender, and the Eighty-second, with its Corps, returned to Raleigh, and went into camp. On April 20, the Regiment broke camp and proceeded to Richmond, where it was received by General Grant, when it took up the line of march for Washington, arriving at Alexandria May 20, and after participating in the grand review at Washington on the 24th, the Eighty-second was mustered out of service at the same place, June 9, and returned to Chicago, arriving June 16,—having marched during its time of service, two thousand five hundred and three miles, and participated in many severe engagements, with honor to itself and the city which sent it to the field.

The Regiment returned with three hundred men, under the following officers: Colonel, Edward S. Salomon, Brevet Brigadier General; Lieutenant Colonel, Ferdinand Rolshausen; Adjutant, Otto Balke; Quartermaster, Hermann Panse; Surgeon, Charles E. Boerner; Assistant Surgeon, Hermann Deitzel. Company A: Captain, Anton Bruhn; First Lieutenant, Charles E. Stueven. Company B: Captain, George Heinzmann; First Lieutenant, Eugene Hepp. Company C: Captain, Frank Kirchner; First Lieutenant, William Loeb.

Company D: Captain, Rudolph Mueller, Company E: First Lieutenant, Moses O. Lindbergh. Company F: Captain, Eugene F. Weigel; First Lieutenant, Frederick Thomas. Company G: First Lieutenant, Carl Lotz. Company H: Captain, Emil Frey; First Lieutenant, Joseph Riegert. Company I: Captain, Joseph Gottlob; First Lieutenant, Christian Erickson. Company K: Second Lieutenant, George Bauer.

The Regiment was greeted at the depot by crowds of friends, and escorted to the Turner Hall, where it was welcomed by William Rapp, Esq., of the "Staats Zeitung," and General Hecker, its old Commander, and others,—Colonel Salomon replying, in behalf of the Regiment, to the numerous congratulatory speeches. On the 19th it was tendered a public reception at the great Sanitary Fair, then in progress, returning thereafter to Camp Douglas, where it received its final pay and discharge a few days later.

HISTORY OF EIGHTY-THIRD INFANTRY.

The Eighty-third Infantry was organized at Monmouth in August, 1862, by Colonel A. C. Harding, and was mustered into the United States' service August 21.

Companies A, B, C, F and H were recruited in Warren county; D, in Mercer; E, G, I and K, in Knox. The Regiment moved from camp August 25, via Burlington and St. Louis to Cairo, arriving there the 29th, and reporting to Brigadier General Tuttle, commanding post. September 3, moved to Fort Henry. On the 5th, moved to Fort Donelson, leaving two companies at Fort Heiman and three at Fort Henry. The Regiment remained at Fort Donelson during the year. Colonel W. W. Lowe, Fifth Iowa Cavalry, commanding Brigade.

The companies at Forts Henry and Heiman subsequently rejoined the Regiment and it remained at Fort Donelson until September 20, 1863, when the right wing moved to Clarksville. The Regiment had heavy guard duty to perform and as the whole country, especially the banks of the Tennessee and Cumberland Rivers, were infested with guerrillas, we had daily skirmishes with the enemy. Some of them were quite severe, as at Waverly, Tenn., and at Garretsburg, Ky., where the lamented General Ranson, then Colonel of the Eleventh Illinois, had command.

On the 3d of February, 1863, at Fort Donelson, nine companies of the Eighty-third, with Company C, Second Illinois Light Artillery, successfully resisted the attack of Forrest and Wheeler with 8,000 men. The battle lasted from 1:30 until 8:30 o'clock P. M., when the enemy was compelled to retire with a loss of 800, killed and wounded. The loss of the Regiment was 13 killed and 51 wounded. Colonel Harding was promoted to Brigadier General for gallant conduct on this occasion and Lieutenant Colonel A. A. Smith to Colonel. Among the killed were Captain P. E. Reed, Company A, Lieutenant Harmon D. Bissell, Quartermaster of the Regiment, and First Sergeant James Campbell, Company C. Among the wounded was Captain John McClanahan, of Company B, who while in the act of changing positions to meet an attack, was wounded with a minnie ball, from the effects of which he died February 23.

On the morning of the 20th of August, 1864, Captain William M. Turnbull, of Company B, with eleven of his company, left Fort Donelson in pursuit of a party of five guerillas, who were making their way to the Tennessee River with a lot of horses, but failing to overtake them he was overpowered while returning to his command by a party of guerrillas secreted in the timber, and he and seven of his men were killed, while one had both his legs broken, but he was afterward cowardly murdered by guerrillas, who found him lying helpless in a barn where some humane citizen had taken him for safety. But three of the party escaped to tell the sad fate of their companions.

While at Clarksville the Regiment was engaged in several expeditions under Major General L. H. Rousseau in pursuit of Forrest and Wheeler, who were attempting the destruction of General Sherman's communications.

During the year 1864, the Regiment had some two hundred miles of communications to guard and much heavy patrol duty. During the winter of 1864-'65, the Eighty-third was on provost duty at Nashville, Tenn.

Before the muster out of the Regiment, the following order was received by Colonel Smith commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF MIDDLE TENNESSEE,
NASHVILLE, TENN., May 31, 1865.

Colonel A. A. Smith, Commanding Fifth Sub. District Middle Tennessee.

DEAR COLONEL.—By an order just received the troops of 1862 will be mustered out of service. Your Regiment will go out under that order. I am unwilling to part with you and your officers and men without expressing my highest commendation of the soldierly bearing and gentlemanly conduct of all during the time they have been under my command. At the time when I most needed brave men and steady soldiers to drive Wheeler and Forrest out of the district I was but too happy to avail myself of the services of as many of your Regiment as could be spared for that duty. And relying greatly upon them I was not disappointed in their deportment.

I have not been troubled with complaints against them for disorderly conduct and marauding, but their deportment in the army and community has been brave and soldierly, proving that the brave man and true soldier is always honest and just. I can truly say I do not know a regiment in the service whose brave and soldierly bearing more fully entitles it to the respect and gratitude of the country than the Eighty-third Infantry, and you and they will take with you, individually and collectively, my sincere thanks for your efficient services and my kindest wishes for your future welfare in all things.

I am, Colonel, very truly, etc.,

LOVEL H. ROSSEAU,

Major General Commanding.

On the 26th of June the Regiment was mustered out at Nashville and moved for Chicago Brevet Brigadier General Arthur A. Smith commanding, where it received final pay and discharge July 4, 1865.

HISTORY OF EIGHTY-FOURTH INFANTRY.

The Eighty-fourth Infantry was organized at Quincy in August, 1862, by Colonel L. H. Waters, of Macomb, Ill., and was mustered into the service of the United States September 1, 1862, with 939 men and officers.

The Regiment was ordered to Louisville, Ky., September 23, and was assigned to the Tenth Brigade of the Fourth Division, which had formerly been commanded by General Nelson.

On the organization of the Army of the Cumberland the Regiment was one of five composing the Third Brigade of the First Division of the Twenty-first Army Corps. General John M. Palmer commanded the Division, and General Thomas L. Crittenden, of Kentucky, the Corps.

After the battle of Chickamauga the Army of the Cumberland was reorganized, and the Fourth and Fourteenth Corps were formed of the old Army of the Cumberland, while the Tenth and Twelfth Corps were combined and formed the Twentieth. The Eighty-fourth was one of nine regiments composing the Third Brigade of the First Division of the Fourth Corps. The Division was commanded by the gallant Major General Stanley, who was soon after assigned to the command of the Corps. The Regiment shared the fortunes of the Army of the Cumberland, and was with it in every march and in every battle until the close of the war.

It was at the battle of Perryville and on the march with Buel through Kentucky in the pursuit of the Confederate army under Bragg.

When the famous "Kentucky Campaign" closed the Regiment went to Nashville, Tenn., via Mt. Vernon, Somerset, Columbia, Glasgow and Gallatin.

In the march from Buch Creek to Somerset, a distance of 12 miles, some 90 of the men were compelled to wade through snow, slush and mud the entire distance without shoes.

The Regiment participated in the battle of Stone River, where it lost 228 men and officers killed and wounded out of a total of 350 engaged.

It was in the Tullahoma Campaign and at the battle of Chickamauga. In Chattanooga during what was called the "Siege" and with Hooker at Lookout Mountain in "the fight above the clouds." It participated in the "Atlanta Campaign" and the battle at Franklin and Nashville under Thomas.

The Regiment was entitled to inscribe upon its battle flag the names of Perryville, Stone River, Woodbury, Chickamauga, Lookout Mountain, Missionary Ridge, Ringgold, Dalton, Buzzard Roost, Resaca, Burnt Hickory, Kenesaw Mountain, Smyrna, Atlanta, Jonesboro, Lovejoy Station, Franklin and Nashville.

The total casualties in battle were	558
Killed by accident	7
Died of disease	124
Total casualties	689

But three of the Regiment were taken prisoners, namely, Lieutenant Colonel Morton, Corporal Chowning and Private Herbert of Company C. Colonel Morton was exchanged after having been nine months in Libby; Corporal Chowning escaped from Andersonville after having been a prisoner for more than one year, and rejoined his command during the Atlanta Campaign. Private Herbert, who had lost a leg at Chickamauga, was shot by a sentinel at Andersonville for having crossed the "Dead Line." His grave is numbered 1136.

HISTORY OF EIGHTY-FIFTH INFANTRY.

The Eighty-fifth Regiment was organized at Peoria, about the first of September, 1862, at a time when the Governor was in need of troops, as the Union troops had been beaten back at Bull Run a short time before and Bragg was threatening Louisville, Ky., General Nelson being driven back to that point. The Eighty-fifth Regiment was one that was ordered to that point immediately after its organization, hence the members left their work, families and friends, and were hurried immediately to the forefront of the battle, for before they knew what dress parade was they opened the battle of Perryville by making a bayonet charge at 3 o'clock in the morning of that bloody day. After the battle the Regiment followed up Bragg's retreat to, and beyond Nashville, Tenn., to Mill Creek, where the Regiment was attached to General Sheridan's Division. When the army advanced on Bragg at Murfreesboro the Eighty-fifth was placed on post duty at Nashville and remained there doing train, police and post duty, and was called on to guard a train to the army during the battle of Stone River, which they succeeded in doing in time to take a hand in the fight for one day there. During the remainder of the time that the Regiment staid at Nashville but little occurred to or with it worthy of historical notice; but from the time the Regiment was relieved at Nashville, it was always found in the active part of the Army of the Cumberland until the close of the war, being one of the last regiments to leave the field at Chickamauga, and in the lead in crossing the Tennessee in pontoons, when the stars and bars were lowered from Missionary Ridge; and from there, with 100 rounds of cartridges in haversacks instead of bread, they were with the command that hastened to the relief of besieged troops at Knoxville, Tenn., returning to their camp at North Chickamauga, to remain until New Year's, 1864, when the Regiment moved to McAfee's Church, on the battlefield of Chickamauga.

During the winter of 1863 and 1864, the Regiment was stationed at or on the battlefield: they were in the detail that made the reconnoissance against Dalton, Ga., at Rocky Faced Ridge, where we met with considerable loss in killed and wounded. After accomplishing the work assigned there, moved back and awaited the opening of spring and with it the campaign against Atlanta, where the Regiment every day for four months was in hearing of the rattle of musketry and the boom of cannon. It took active part in the battles of Resaca Rome, Dallas, Kenesaw, Peach Tree Creek, Atlanta and Jonesboro, (the last fight of the Atlanta campaign), when the Regiment was detailed to escort 1,600 prisoners back to Atlanta.

The Regiment is deserving of especial mention at Rome, where they swam the Etowah river, floated their accoutrements over on rafts of rails, formed a skirmish line, drove the enemy from and run the stars and stripes on the court house before all the enemy had crossed the other river and burned the bridge. Also at Kenesaw and Peach Tree Creek, where the Regiment lost half of its available force.

After returning with the above mentioned prisoners, but a few days elapsed until the Second Division of Fourteenth Army Corps, (commonly called by the boys Jeff. C. Davis cavalry,) was detailed to clear Forrest from the line of communication back in Tennessee and marched after said command until it crossed the river at Florence on Mussel Shoals, at which place there was a skirmish in which the Eighty-fifth was again in front and met with slight loss. Then marching I don't know how many hundreds of miles, and wading rivers cold as ice, the command of which the Eighty-fifth was a component part, reached Kingston, Ga., just in time to tear up the railroad to Atlanta, and start on the left wing of the march to the sea.

Was at Milledgeville at the session of the mock Legislature. Marched to Savannah and took part in the capture of that city of revolutionary notoriety, where the noble Pulaski fell.

Then, still occupying the left of Sherman's Army, started on the Carolina Campaigns, wading swamps covered with ice, where the tears were made to flow from the bravest of men by the severity of the cold water.

The Eighty-fifth Regiment was a part of the Fourteenth Army Corps from its organization until the close of the war, and performed its full share of duties, marches and battles of that Corps, which duties history will show no Corps in the service excelled and few equalled. Was present at the battle of Bentonville, the capture of Goldsboro and Raleigh and was doing picket duty when Sherman met the Confederate delegates to arrange the conditions of surrender of Johnston's Army, which act, when finally concluded, was followed by one of the grandest and most trying marches that any army ever made, from Raleigh to Richmond. The Eighty-fifth with the Fourteenth Army Corps, being on outside, made a march of something more than 35 miles per day for seven successive days, from there to Washington, and took part in the grand review at that place, rested a few days and was mustered out on the 5th day of June, A. D. 1865. Was sent to Springfield, Ill., and was paid off and sent back to friends and home on the 20th day of the same month.

HISTORY OF EIGHTY-SIXTH INFANTRY.

The Eighty-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry was mustered into the service by Captain R. C. Ewing on the 27th day of August, 1862, at Camp Lyon, Peoria, Ill., at which time it numbered 923 men, rank and file.

On the 7th of September, the Regiment embarked for Louisville, Ky., where it remained until the 1st of October, when it joined in the pursuit of Bragg, under the command of General Buell. On the 8th day of October was fought the battle of Chaplin Hills, or Perryville, in which the Eighty sixth had the advance, and in a charge there was one man killed and 13 wounded.

October 11th, marched after Bragg, in his retreat to Crab Orchard, Ky.; then returned and marched to Nashville, Tenn., arriving at Nashville November 7th.

June 30, 1863, marched to Murfreesboro, Tenn., and returned to Nashville July 18.

August 11, Colonel David D. Irons died, and on August 20 the Regiment left Nashville and marched to Brentwood. Remained in that vicinity till August 28, then marched to Columbia, Tenn.

September 4, marched to Huntsville, Ala., thence to Bridgeport, where we arrived September 14; crossed the river on pontoons, and marched to Chattanooga, Tenn., arriving there September 16, and was assigned to the Reserve Corps, General Gordon Granger.

On September 19 and 20, participated in the battle of Chickamauga, losing one killed, four wounded and one captured.

On September 25, crossed the Tennessee River, marched six miles up the river, and guarded a ford till November 23, when the Regiment assisted General Sherman to float his pontoons down the river at night, cross his army, capture a rebel post, and make the attack on the north end of Missionary Ridge; then marched in pursuit of Bragg to Ringgold, Ga.

On November 29, marched for Knoxville, Tenn., to the relief of General Burnside, and returned to Chattanooga. Crossed the Tennessee River, and occupied the old camp ground, six miles above, on December 18. On this march one man was accidentally killed.

On the 26th of December we recrossed the Tennessee River and encamped near Chickamauga Station.

In February, 1864, the Regiment joined in a reconnoissance, going as far as Buzzard Roost, where it took part in the engagement of that name, losing one killed and seven wounded. Then returned to camp, where it stayed until March 6, when marched to Lee's and Gordon's Mills; (there on account of sickness Lieutenant Colonel D. W. Magee resigned, and Major Allen L. Fahnestock was commissioned as Lieutenant Colonel, and Captain J. F. Thomas as Major). Stayed here till May 3, then marched to Ringgold, where General Sherman was concentrating his grand army for the march upon Atlanta; left Ringgold on the 5th, and arrived at Tunnel Hill the 7th.

On the 10th of May, in the fight near Buzzard Roost, one man wounded; then moved to the right through Snake Creek Gap, and on the 14th and 15th participated in the battle of Resaca, Ga., losing four wounded and one missing. Moved from Resaca 16th, and arrived in Rome, Ga., on the 17th; was in the fight at Rome, losing five killed and 12 wounded.

On May 24 marched from Rome to Dallas; had a skirmish, having one man wounded and one accidentally wounded; then moved through Ackworth and arrived at Kenesaw June 15; while in front of Kenesaw lost one killed and seven wounded.

In making a charge at Kenesaw on June 27, the Regiment lost 26 killed, 60 wounded and 12 missing, holding its position till the 2d day of July; during the interim it lost 2 killed and 7 wounded.

July 3, marched after the enemy to the Chattahoochie River, losing 2 men wounded, where it arrived July 10.

On July 18, moved up, crossed the river, and skirmished to Peach Tree Creek.

On the 19th, engaged in the battle of Peach Tree Creek, losing 4 killed and 11 wounded.

HISTORY OF EIGHTY-SEVENTH INFANTRY.

The Eighty-seventh Regiment, Illinois Infantry Volunteers, was enlisted in August, 1862. It was composed of companies A and E, from Hamilton county, company H, from Edwards, company D, from Wayne, and companies C, B, F, G, I and K, from White county.

In the latter part of August, 1862, the companies went into camp at Shawneetown, Ill., where the organization of the Regiment was effected. It was mustered in October 3, 1862, the muster to take effect from the 2d day of August.

January 31, 1863, it embarked on the two transports Freestone and May Duke for Memphis, Tenn., arriving there February 4th. It was very inclement weather, and during this transfer and its first camp at Memphis, the measles broke out and prevailed with great virulence in the Regiment. This disease cost the Eighty-seventh 250 men in dead and disabled.

While at Memphis, the Eighty-seventh, in company with the Sixty-third Illinois, made a raid on Hernando, Miss., capturing a great deal of property, and putting a stop to the incursions of Colonel Bligh's partisan Confederate Cavalry.

May 9th, 1863, the Eighty-seventh and Sixty-third Illinois Regiments embarked on the steamer Crescent City from Memphis, and arrived at Young's Point, La., May 11th. At this place the Regiment was actively engaged in picket and fatigue duty, repairing the corduroy road, until the night of the 21st of May, when it crossed the Mississippi river at Warrenton, and went into bivouac in the hills above the town. The next morning the Eighty-seventh and Sixty-third Illinois Regiments, in Brigade commanded by Colonel McCown, of the Sixty-third Illinois, were assigned to General McArthur's Division, on the left of the line of battle. Here they closed up the gap on the extreme left of the line of investment, and remained for six hours under a steady fire of shot and shell from the enemy's works.

On the 23d the Regiment was ordered to report to General John A. Logan, on the right centre. Here it remained several days--five companies, in command of Colonel T. E. Whiting, being detached to garrison the post at Warrenton.

June 3d the whole Regiment was on duty at Warrenton, where it remained until June 23d, when it was assigned a position in the Second Brigade, General Slack's; Twelfth Division, General A. Hovey's; Thirteenth Corps, General John A. McClernand's; and took its place in the trenches, until the capture of the city.

On the night of July 4th, it moved out on the road to Jackson, Miss., and participated in the battles before and after reaching that place.

July 20, 1863, the Regiment marched back to Vicksburg, and on the 25th of July embarked for Natchez. Here it made an excursion back in the country to Kingston, capturing a vast pile of Confederate cotton.

August 10, 1863, in company with the Forty-seventh Indiana, it embarked for New Orleans. These were the first Western troops making the descent of the Mississippi River. Here the Second Brigade—Slack's—was assigned to the Third Division of the Thirteenth Corps.

September 13, 1863, found the Regiment at Brashear City, La. While here the Colonel, John E. Whiting, resigned on account of ill health, Colonel John M. Crebs taking command officially, as he had been the commander virtually after the Regiment arrived at Memphis, Tenn.

During September and October the Regiment was engaged in the movements along the Atchafalaya and Teche Bayous, being in the affairs at Grand Coteau and Vermillionville, La.

In November, 1863, the Regiment was mounted on the stock of the country—mustangs, Mexican ponies and mules—it rode everything except steers—and were occupied in scouting duty about Franklin and New Iberia, La. By strict attention to business, good judgment as regards horses, dash and energy, it was the best mounted Regiment in the Department of the Gulf in less than three months.

In February, 1864, with the First Louisiana, it formed the Third Brigade, Colonel H. Robinson commanding, in the Cavalry Division of the Department of the Gulf, in command of General A. L. Lee.

March 14, 1864, the Eighty-seventh led the cavalry movement from Franklin, La., on the Red River campaign.

April 7th it was actively engaged at the battle of Wilson's Hill, losing about 30 men in killed and wounded.

On the 8th of April it took part in the battle of Sabine Cross Roads, or Mansfield, and was the only Regiment, in that disastrous defeat, that left the field in regimental formation. It stood on the ground while the Nineteenth Corps formed its line of battle behind it. In this battle Colonel H. Robinson, First Louisiana, our Brigade commander, was wounded, and Colonel John M. Crebs, Eighty-seventh Illinois, was placed in command of the Brigade. On the 9th the Regiment was in the battle of Pleasant Hill.

On the retreat from Sabine Cross Roads to Alexandria the Eighty-seventh was either in the front, flank or rear of the retreating column, and constantly engaged with the enemy's skirmishers.

May 13th it was in the advance, and continually under fire in the movement from Alexandria to Simsport, on Atchafalaya Bayou, being in the battle of Marksville on the 15th of May.

On May 21 the Regiment went into camp at Morganzia Bend, La., where it remained during the summer and fall, engaged in foraging, scouting, and almost constant warfare. Part of this time it was on the steamer Baltic, one of the Marine Brigade boats. During these months the Regiment was kept busy scouting and fighting along the network of bayous between the Mississippi River on the east and Atchafalaya on the west; Red River on the north and Bayou Plaquemine on the south. There was no part of that country it did not know thoroughly.

It fought on Bayou Gros Tete, Bayou Letsworth, Bayou Manguine, Bayou Atchafalaya and along the lakes of Old River. It captured more prisoners, horses and stores—destroyed more Confederate property—than all the combined forces camped at Morganzia.

In the first part of August, 1864, Captain Thomas Sheridan, with a detachment of about 50 men from the Regiment, was surrounded and captured by a largely superior force of the enemy, near Williamsport, La. This was the only loss the Regiment sustained by capture.

September 4th, 1864, the Regiment embarked on the steamer Ohio Belle for White River Island. Here it remained until January, 1865—three companies having been detached for duty at St. Charles, Ark.

In January, 1865, the Regiment moved to Helena, Ark., where it remained doing scouting service until mustered out June 16th, 1865, and ordered to Springfield, Illinois, where it arrived June 24, 1865.

The Regiment was paid off, and disbanded at Camp Butler, July 2, 1865.

HISTORY OF EIGHTY-EIGHTH INFANTRY.

The Eighty-eighth Infantry Illinois Volunteers was organized in Chicago, Illinois, in September, 1862, by Colonel Francis T. Sherman, and was known as the "Second Board of Trade Regiment." It was mustered in September 4, 1862.

Ordered to Louisville, Kentucky, September 4, and went into camp below Jeffersonville. Received arms on 11th. Moved to Covington, Kentucky, 12th. On the 15th was brigaded with Twenty-fourth Wisconsin, and Second and Fifteenth Missouri, Colonel Greasel's (First) Brigade, Granger's Division, Army of the Ohio. On the 21st moved to Louisville, and was brigaded with Twenty-first Michigan, Twenty-fourth Wisconsin and Thirty-sixth Illinois, Colonel Greasel commanding, Thirty-seventh Brigade, Eleventh Division, Brigadier General P. H. Sheridan commanding.

October 1, 1862, marched in pursuit of Bragg. Engaged in the battle of Perryville, October 8—losing four killed, five mortally wounded, and 36 wounded. Marched to Crab Orchard, and thence to Lebanon and Bowling Green, Kentucky, arriving October 30, 1862. Moved toward Nashville, arriving at Edgefield November 7. Moved November 17 six miles south of Nashville, on Nolensville pike.

November 20, 1862, brigaded in First Brigade, Second Division, under Major General P. H. Sheridan, of the Right Wing, Army of the Cumberland.

December 26, 1862, marched in the advance upon Murfreesboro.

December 31, 1862, to January 3, 1863, engaged in the battle of Stone River.

January, 1863, to June, 1863, encamped at Murfreesboro, with the exception of a scout to Columbia, Tennessee, in pursuit of Van Horn.

June, 1863, to July, 1863, brigaded in First Brigade, Second Division, Twentieth Army Corps. Engaged in the advance in movement against and pursuit of Bragg, from Middle Tennessee.

August, 1863, encamped at Bridgeport, Alabama.

September, 1863, joined in the Chickamauga Campaign, and advanced to Alpine, Georgia.

September 19 and 20, 1863, engaged in the battle of Chickamauga.

October, 1863, encamped at Chattanooga. Brigaded in First Brigade, Second Division, Fourth Army Corps.

November 23 to 25, 1863, engaged in the battle of Mission Ridge. Formed part of the assaulting column upon the left center of the enemy's position, and was among the first to place its colors upon the enemy's works.

December, 1863, to February, 1864, engaged in scouting through East Tennessee, when it encamped at Loudon, where it remained until April, 1864.

April, 1864, moved to Cleveland, Tennessee.

May, 1864, joined in the advance upon the Atlanta Campaign. It continued with the advance, as part of the Fourth Corps, commanded by Major General Howard, throughout the whole of that campaign, up to and including the capture of Atlanta—participating in the following principal battles and skirmishes: Rocky-Face Ridge, Resaca, Adairsville, New Hope Church, Pine Mountain, Mud Creek, Kenesaw Mountain, Smyrna Camp Ground, Atlanta, Jonesboro and Lovejoy Station. Its services in the advance movements were continuous and constant, from May to September, 1864.

September, 1864, was ordered to Chattanooga, and was engaged during the month in duty at that place and Whiteside and Bridgeport.

October, 1864, moved to Gaylesville, Alabama, and returned to Chattanooga.

November, 1864, moved to Pulaski, Tennessee, and thence, upon the advance of Hood, to Columbia, Franklin and Nashville. It was engaged in skirmishes at Columbia and Spring Hill, and in the battle of Franklin, upon the right centre, the main point of attack of the enemy.

December 15 and 16, 1864, engaged in the battle of Nashville.

December 16, 1864, to January, 1865, joined in the pursuit of Hood, from Tennessee.

January, 1865, to March, 1865, encamped at Huntsville, Alabama.

March, 1865, moved to Bull's Gap, East Tennessee. May, 1865, moved to Nashville, where it remained until its muster-out.

During the period of its service the Regiment was always in the front. It was never upon garrison duty. Its losses in the engagements in which it participated aggregate two-thirds of its number; and its conduct in every battle was such as to merit and receive the commendation of its Brigade, Division and Corps Commanders. For its conduct at Stone River, Mission Ridge and Franklin, it was made the subject of special mention.

The Regiment was mustered out June 9, 1865, at Nashville, Tennessee, and arrived at Chicago June 13, 1865, where it received final pay and discharge June 22, 1865.

HISTORY OF EIGHTY-NINTH INFANTRY.

The "Rail Road Regiment" was organized by the Railroad Companies of Illinois, at Chicago, in August, 1862, Captain John Christopher, Sixteenth United States Infantry, was appointed Colonel, and Charles T. Hotchkiss, Lieutenant Colonel. It was mustered into the United States service August 27.

Ordered to Louisville, Ky., September 4, and was assigned, by Major General Wright, commanding Department of Ohio, to Third Brigade, Colonel Woodruff; Second Division, General Cruft; Army of Kentucky, General Nelson. Assigned, October 1, to Sixth Brigade, General Willich; Second Division, General Sill; McCook's Corps of Buell's Army.

The Regiment, on leaving Louisville, started in pursuit of the rebel forces under General Bragg, and, after a fruitless and wearisome march of a month, reached Bowling Green, Ky. At this point the tenth company, F, joined the Regiment. When in the service but about four months, it took an active part in the memorable battle of Stone River, where, by its gallant conduct, the men soon became classified among the old, tried soldiers. It did well, and among the heroes who that day died in liberty's cause was Captain Henry S. Willett, of Company H.

On the 7th of January, 1863, Colonel Christopher, who had never joined the Regiment, resigned. The line of promotion then ensuing made Captain William D. Williams, of Company F, Major.

At Liberty Gap another loss was sustained: Captain Herbert M. Blake, Company K, a truly brave and efficient officer fell mortally wounded. Chickamauga seemed to affix the seal of its devotion. There fell Lieutenant Colonel Duncan J. Hall, Captains Rice, Spink and Whiting, and Lieutenant Ellis, besides the scores of brave men who fought with noble heroism, and who dared to "do and die" in defense of the "old flag."

Upon the reorganization of the Army of the Cumberland the Regiment was transferred, with Willich's command, to its new position in the First Brigade, Third Division, Fourth Army Corps. At Mission Ridge it again encountered the foe, scaling the enemy's entrenchments and driving him from them. In this charge fell those gallant officers, Lieutenant E. O. Young, Company A, and Captain Henry L. Rowell, Company C.

It then marched to the relief of Burnside, besieged at Knoxville. This accomplished, it moved on with the Brigade, in the marches and counter marches through East Tennessee.

Early in April, 1864, it marched with the command to Southern Tennessee, preparatory to General Sherman's glorious campaign through Northern Georgia, for the occupation of Atlanta.

With the Brigade, it participated in the splendid victories of Rocky Face, Resaca, Pickett's Mills, Kenesaw Mountain, Peach Tree Creek, and the flank movement of Atlanta, and pursued the routed enemy in his retreat to Jonesboro and Lovejoy's Station.

On this campaign, Lieutenant Nathaniel Street, of Company D, and Captain William Harkness, Company A, offered up their lives a sacrifice to their country.

After the unsucessful attempt of the rebel forces to destroy the railroad communications of the army between Atlanta and Chattanooga, the Regiment rendered very important service, while on detached duty, in repairing the damages on the railroad inflicted by the enemy.

On the 30th of October, 1864, the Regiment was ordered to rejoin the command at Pulaski, Tenn. It participated in the brilliant achievements of Spring Hill, Columbia, Franklin and Nashville, in the latter of which fell Lieutenant P. G. Taite, of Company G, pierced by a cannon ball. Subsequently it pursued Hood's shattered forces in their flying retreat across Tennessee.

It passed winter quarters at Huntsville, Ala., in January, 1865, and on the 1st of February traveled by railroad for Nashville, and after lying there five days, returned to Camp Green. About the middle of March, the command embarked on the cars for East Tennessee, to re-establish communications through to Virginia, and prepare to repel rebel invasion.

On the surrender of Lee's army, further movements in that section were abandoned, and the Fourth Crops returned by cars to Nashville, to muster out of service its non-veterans.

On the 10th of June, 1865, the Regiment was mustered out of the United States service, in the field, near Nashville, Tenn. Left there June 10th, by the Louisville, New Albany & Chicago Railroad, and arrived in Chicago on the night of June 12th, 1865, and was discharged at Camp Dougles, on the 24th of June, 1865, making its term of service two years, nine months and twenty-seven days.

HISTORY OF NINETIETH INFANTRY.

The Ninetieth Infantry was mustered into the United States service, at Chicago, on the 7th of September, 1862. Company A, was recruited at Rockford; Company B, at Galva; Company C, at Lockport and LaSalle; Company D, at Joliet; Company E, at Chicago; Company F, at Chicago and Springfield; Company G, and Company H, at Chicago; Company I, at Belvidere, and Company K, at Ottawa. Timothy O'Meara, formerly a Captain in the Forty-second New York Infantry, and who had been taken prisoner at the battle of Ball's Bluff, was commissioned Colonel, on the recommendation of Colonel Corcoran, of the Sixty-ninth New York Infantry.

The Regiment remained in Chicago until the 27th of November, performing guard duty at Camp Douglas, when it was ordered to the front, by way of Cairo. From thence it proceeded, by transports, to Columbus, Ky.; thence to Lagrange, Tenn., where it arrived at 8 P. M., December 2, when it went into camp, naming its first village of tents in the South Camp Yates, in honor of the great war Governor of Illinois. After a stay of three days the first march was commenced, in the direction of Holly Springs. When Cold Water was reached a camp was established, and the Regiment was assigned the duty of guarding the railroad bridges. This railroad was Grant's chief line of communication.

On the morning of December 20, Van Dorn, after having surprised and captured Holly Springs, attacked our position at Cold Water, but Colonel O'Meara was prepared for him, having his Regiment in position, and being re-enforced by some of our troops which escaped from Holly Springs. Van Dorn was repulsed, when he moved his force to the right and passed on. For this encounter with the enemy General Grant afterwards took occasion, in a general order, to commend Colonel O'Meara and his Regiment.

The fall of Holly Springs determined the return of Grant's army, and the Regiment marched back to Lagrange and again occupied Camp Yates. After a stay of a few weeks the next move was to Lafayette, a station on the railroad between Lagrange and Memphis, where the Regiment remained until some time in May, 1863, when orders were received to move, via Memphis, down the Mississippi to Vicksburg. On arriving there, the Regiment was attached to General Wm. Sooy Smith's command, engaged in noting the movements of the enemy in the rear of Vicksburg.

After the fall of Vicksburg, took part in the Jackson campaign, which resulted in driving Johnson out of Jackson, and across Pearl River, July 17, 1863. This had been a severe and tiresome march, the weather being excessively hot and water scarce. Returning to the Big Black River, the Regiment went into camp and remained until September 27, when the Fifteenth Corps, to which it then belonged, set out for Memphis, up the river by boat, and thence along the line of the Memphis & Charleston Railroad, for Chattanooga.

On the 11th of October, at Germantown, twelve miles out from Memphis, the Regiment boarded platform cars and was hurried forward to Collierville, where General Sherman, with an escort of the Thirteenth Regulars, together with the garrison (Sixty-sixth Indiana had been surrounded by 3,000 Confederate cavalry, with eight guns, under command of General Chalmers. Arrived only to find that the enemy, alarmed at our approach, had disappeared. The march was resumed, arriving at Trenton Valley, opposite the Lookout Mountain range, Colonel O'Meara was ordered to move his Regiment some four miles to the right of the Fifteenth Corps, and after dark to build camp fires enough to represent a large body of troops, which was successfully accomplished, and resulted in making the enemy extend his line to the left. The next morning the Fifteenth Corps moved through the valley under the Lookout range towards Chattanooga.

On the 24th of November, crossed the Tennessee River, and on the morning of the 25th was in line for the desperate struggle on that day—the battle of Mission Ridge. Colonel O'Meara, Lieutenant James Conway and a number of men were killed, and many officers and men wounded. Among the officers seriously hurt were Captains M. W. Murphy, Daniel O'Connor and William Cunningham, and Lieutenant Colonel Stewart. The list of casualties reached nearly a hundred.

Our most serious loss was Colonel O'Meara. He was a man whose place was not easily filled. Captain Flynn was now in command of the Regiment, and it, with the Fifteenth Corps, went in pursuit of Bragg's Army as far as Greysville, Ga., and from there to the relief of Burnside, at Knoxville, Tenn.

On the 5th of December, at Morgantown, it was learned that Longstreet was in full retreat towards Virginia, and the Regiment returned to Chattanooga. On this march an incident occurred that gave the Fifteenth Corps its badge. One morning while laying by the road side while the Twentieth Corps was passing to the lead in the days march, one of its stragglers with a full "haversack," asked one of our number what Corps? "The Fifteenth," was the reply. "What is your badge?" "Badge!" says the man of the Ninetieth, as he gave his cartridge box a slap, "we have no badge but forty rounds." General Logan heard the story and adopted a cartridge box inscribed "forty rounds," set diagonally on a square, as the Fifteenth Corps badge.

From Chattanooga we went to Scottsboro, Ala., and finally into camp at Fackler, a station on the railroad between Stevenson and Scottsboro. The command had been continually on the move since leaving Big Black, often on short rations and with poor clothing; many of the men nearly barefooted, and all tired and worn out.

Early in May, 1864, the movement towards Atlanta began, and the Ninetieth, attached to the First Brigade, Second Division, Fifteenth Corps, bore its full share in that campaign. The march was by way of Ships Gap, Villanow, and through Snake Creek Gap upon Resaca where a lively battle was fought, the Regiment sustaining a small loss in wounded. The next move was on Dallas, where a lively skirmish was had; thence to New Hope Church, Big Shanty, Kenesaw Mountain, Marietta, Nickajack Creek, Rosswell, and across the Chattahoochie River on the 9th of July. On the 22d of July one of the fiercest battles of the campaign was fought.

The enemy occupied a line of breast works, from which he retired during the night of the 21st. Early on the morning of the 22d the Union forces moved up to this line and immediately went to work and moved the dirt to the other side of the ditch, thus facing the breast work towards Atlanta. This was a timely piece of work, for the enemy had during the night massed a considerable force on the left of our army and made a desperate attempt to double us up, when the line in front had been greatly weakened by troops going to the left. To prevent this he attacked the Union line furiously directly in front, and finally flanked our position by getting through the line at a deep cut on the Augusta Railroad, and drove us out of the breast work, which had been of great service to us and great damage to the enemy, their loss in killed and severely wounded in the immediate front of our Regiment being very heavy. The Ninetieth lost a considerable number of men taken prisoners, who were taken to Andersonville. This was the day General McPherson was killed. He was a man admired and loved by all who knew him. The left wing of our army was at length able to maintain its position and the line of the breast works was again occupied by the Union forces.

On the 27th, moved from the left to the extreme right of Sherman's Army, and on the 28th another hard battle was fought. Among the officers of the Regiment, Major Flynn, Captain Feeney and Lieutenant White were wounded. This battle was followed by heavy skirmishing at intervals until the 25th of August, when another move to the left in the night brought the army to Jonesboro, and on the 30th to another hot encounter with the enemy, which resulted in his retreat and in the occupation of Atlanta by Sherman.

The Regiment now returned to East point and went into camp, after having been on the move flanking and fighting for five months. The next disturbance was occasioned by Hood's attempt to break Sherman's line of communication with Chattanooga, and we followed with the army in that direction until the march to sea was resolved on, which was commenced on the 16th of November, the Regiment being attached to the Third Brigade, Second Division, Fifteenth Corps, General W. B. Hazen commanding the Division. The march was one more laborious than dangerous, road making forming the greater portion of the work, the fighting being confined mostly to skirmishes at the crossing of streams. The enemy gathered in force at Savannah.

The Second Division was assigned the important work of taking Fort McAllister by assault, which was completed on the 13th of December, the colors of the Ninetieth being the first in the fort. In this affair the Regiment lost three killed and twelve wounded.

December 20, the enemy evacuated Savannah in the night, and next morning our forces occupied it. The Regiment remained in camp near Fort McAllister and Savannah until January 15, 1865, when we were loaded bag and baggage on board the United States Gunboat "Wenona," and steamed around to Beaufort, S. C. Moved out on the 24th of January to Pocotaligo.

On the 1st of February began the march towards Columbia. The most noticeable event before reaching there was the wading of a swamp after crossing the North Edisto River. The enemy was disputing the passage of the river on the road, so General Hazen took our Brigade about two miles to the right, crossed the river on a raft made of hewn pine logs found there, and immediately came to the swamp. It was covered with a low growth of timber, and its extent could not be discerned. Just at this time the firing at the road became more rapid, when General Hazen gave the order forward—himself taking the lead. The swamp proved to be about half a mile wide and the water from waist to arm-pit deep, and cold as ice—(12th of February, 1865). But on reaching the further shore it was found that the enemy had gone. A citizen came into camp next morning and told us that he had lived there for twenty years and had never heard of any one crossing that swamp before.

The 17th of February brought us without much trouble to Columbia, and that night made us spectators of its destruction. The town had already been occupied when our Brigade marched in about 3 p. m. After dark the wind arose, fire broke, and spread with resistless fury and dreadful results.

On the 20th took departure from Columbia, and by devious routes and marches reached Bentonville, N. C., on the 21st of March, where the last hostile shot was heard. From there marched to Goldsboro, and thence to Raleigh, where the Regiment was encamped when President Lincoln was so cruelly slain. The war being over, we marched from Raleigh to Petersburg, Va., thence to Richmond and on to Washington, and took part in the Grand Review of Sherman's Army, May 24, 1865.

June 7 the Regiment took its departure for Chicago, where it arrived at midnight the 9th, being among the first to arrive at home from the seat of war.

HISTORY OF NINETY-FIRST INFANTRY.

The Ninety-first Infantry Volunteers was organized at Camp Butler, Illinois, in August, 1862, by Colonel Henry M. Day, and was mustered in on the 8th day of September, 1862.

Left Camp Butler October 1st for the front, and arrived at Shepherdsville, Ky., October 7th, 1862.

From October 8th to December 27th the Regiment was scouting through Kentucky after Morgan, and guarding the Louisville and Nashville railroad.

On the morning of December 27th, 1862, the rebel General John Morgan appeared in force at Elizabethtown, Ky., where the Ninety-first was then stationed, being under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Harry S. Smith. Three companies were detached, guarding the railroad elsewhere, and these had been obliged to surrender the day before. After a preliminary correspondence, each commander demanding a surrender by the other, at 1:30 P. M. the battle commenced by Morgan's batteries opening upon us. We were then using the old altered flint lock muskets, an inferior gun, and our amunition being exhausted, a surrender was agreed upon, and the Regiment paroled. Our loss in killed was seven, and several wounded, some of whom died of their wounds. The rebel loss in killed and wounded exceeded 200.

On the 28th of December, 1862, the Regiment scattered and took the route step for Louisville, Ky., where all the men took transportation, by O. & M. railroad, for St. Louis, Mo. Only seven men reached St. Louis and reported at Benton Barracks on January 1, 1863, the remainder having abandoned the train at points along the line in Illinois, and made their way home, except a few that fell by the wayside. The officers most all got as far as East St. Louis, where they took trains for the north and home.

February 28th, 1863, about two-thirds of the Regiment answered roll-call at Benton Barracks, Mo., and mustered for six months' pay. From February 28th to June 5th, 1863, we made headquarters at Benton Barracks, but a few never reported back to the command, and stand to-day branded as deserters.

June 5th, 1863, the Regiment was exchanged, and newly armed and equipped for the fray. The Regiment went at once into active training and drill until July 8th, 1863, when the Regiment was paid four months' pay, and marched aboard the steamboat, Nebraska, and, in company with the Twenty-ninth Illinois, proceeded down the Mississippi, and arrived at Vicksburg, Miss., at 7 P. M. on the 15th day of July, 1863, and was assigned to a position formerly occupied by Grant's right wing. Here the Regiment lost heavily in effective men, caused by poisoned water, the distillation of the remains of the fallen in the siege of Vicksburg.

Left Vicksburg July 24th; arrived at Port Hudson on the 25th day of July. While here the Regiment made itself useful in scouting the surrounding country until the 13th of August, 1863, when the Regiment was ordered to New Orleans, La.

The Regiment remained at New Orleans, La., until September 5th, 1863, when the Second Division, Thirteenth Army Corps (which included the Ninety-first Illinois) under command of Major General Herron, took steamers up the river, landing at Morganzia Bend on the 6th of September, 1863.

On the morning of the 7th the Ninety-first Illinois, Ninety-fourth Illinois, Twentieth Wisconsin, and a battalion of the Second Illinois Cavalry, with two 12-pound cannons, started west for the Atchafalaya River. About sundown the Brigade had a fight with the enemy, which resulted in the enemy holding their ground and our Brigade falling back six miles.

On the 8th of September we again advanced, driving the enemy across the river, with but little loss to us, but a number of the enemy were killed and about 200 taken prisoners, which were kindly cared for by the Second Illinois Cavalry, into whose custody they were given.

On the 9th of September the Ninety-first Illinois fell back to the Mississippi River, and on the 10th of September took possession of Morganzia, La., where we remained until October 10, 1863, when we started for New Orleans, La., arriving there on the 11th of October, when we were armed with Enfield rifles and were assigned to the First Brigade, Second Division, Thirteenth Army Corps, General Vandever commanding. From this time until the 23d day of October, 1863, the Regiment was on duty as patrols, at which time our Division started for Texas via Mississippi River and Gulf of Mexico, arriving at Point Isabell, Texas, on the 3d day of November, 1863.

November 6th, started for Brownsville, Texas, skirmishing all the way with the enemy, under command of the rebel, General Bee, and landed at Fort Brown, (Brownsville) Texas, on the 9th day of November, 1863, and went into winter quarters, where we remained until December 31, 1863, when the Regiment made its famous raid on Salt Lake, 90 miles out in the enemy's country, capturing a lake of salt two miles square, a few hundred horses, mules and cattle, which were promptly confiscated for the good of the command. The lake we left behind for the use of future generations.

January 9, 1864, arrived safely back on the Rio Grande after a march of over 200 miles without the loss of a man. Here the Regiment remained doing frontier duty until the 28th day of July, when it left Brownsville, and on the 30th day of July, 1864, arrived at Brazos de Santiago, Texas, and was here left to do duty as a garrison of the place until the 11th day of September, 1864, when the Regiment had quite a fight with the rebels near Bagdad, on north side of Rio Grande River, and it was said at the time a squadron of French troops forded the Rio Grande to help the rebels, but all to no use, for they were driven back and over the old battle field of "Palo Alto" of 1846. Rebels loss, 20 killed and left on the field. Our loss, two wounded.

On the 24th day of December broke camp and took steamer for New Orleans, La.; arrived on the 29th day of December, 1864, and was quartered in the "Alabama" Press and did provost duty here until February 21, 1865, when the Regiment was given transportation on board the "Katie Dale." We landed at Mobile Point, Ala., where we remained until the advance on Mobile.

On the 17th day of March, 1865, at 7 a. m. the Ninety-first Illinois in the advance marched, the Thirteenth Army Corps, General Gordon Granger commanding, through swamps, building "corduroy" and wading creeks and swimming rivers.

On the 27th of March, 1865, met the enemy in force. The First and Third Divisions, Thirteenth Army Corps, the Ninety-first Illinois in advance in double column at half distance, moved out to the attack on the double-quick, the enemy retreating within its stronghold, "Spanish" Fort and Blakely, the key to Mobile. Here the enemy was at home. The battle opened and after a siege of 14 days Spanish Fort surrendered on the 9th day of April, 1865, at 1 o'clock a. m. At 8 o'clock the Brigade moved 10 miles around to and in the rear of Blakely and was just in time to be there at its capture on the 9th at sundown. Throughout this siege the Ninety-first took a very active part, and the fall of these strongholds resulted in the surrender of Mobile to our Division on the 12th of April, the surrender being made by the mayor of the city. General Hardee, in command of the rear guard of the enemy's forces, lingered behind attempting to get away with the stores, but the Second Brigade, Third Division, under command of H. M. Day, Colonel Ninety-first Illinois, the Ninety-first in advance, took the railroad north, and when near Whistler, on Eight Mile Creek, the Ninety-first came upon the rear guard. Companies H, C, B, F, D and A of the Ninety-first were deployed as skirmishers under command of Captain Joseph A. Wells and Captain A. S. Stover, who put the enemy to rout after a running fight of three miles. This was the last fight east of the Mississippi. The Ninety-first proceeded on its march after the enemy until it reached the Tombigbee River near Nanahubba Bluffs, where it went into quarters and commenced building Fort Granger until the 9th day of May, when it received the news of the surrender of Dick Taylor, broke camp and went aboard of the rebel steam and gunboats as they were then moved at the bank under the guns of Fort Granger, and down the river for Mobile, where we remained until July 12, when the Regiment was mustered out, and on the same day started for home, where it arrived on the 22d day of July, 1865, and where it received final pay and discharge on the 28th of July, 1865, and on the 29th the Regiment disbanded and as citizens once more betook themselves for home, there to be received by those they left behind them.

HISTORY OF NINETY-SECOND INFANTRY (MOUNTED.)

The Ninety-Second Regiment Illinois Infantry Volunteers was organized by Major Smith D. Atkins, Eleventh Illinois Infantry Volunteers. It was composed of five companies from Ogle, three from Stephenson, and two from Carroll counties; was mustered into the United States' service September 4, 1862, Major Atkins having been unanimously elected Colonel, at Rockford, Ill., where it remained in comfortable barracks drilling until October 10, 1862, when it was ordered to Cincinnati, and participated in the movements that protected that city, and drove the rebel General Morgan, out of Kentucky.

November 29, 1863, was assigned to Colonel Cochran's (Fourteenth Kentucky Infantry) Brigade, Baird's Division, General Granger's Corps, and took post at Mt. Sterling, Ky., Colonel Atkins commanding post, to guard Western Kentucky from the rebel guerrillas under Furguson. Negroes, in great numbers, flocked into the camp, but were not permitted to remain, except those employed by officers as servants. Colonel Cochran ordered the officers' servants to be delivered up to their masters. Colonel Atkins refused. Great excitement resulted. Colonel Atkins was indicted by the grand juries in Kentucky, but was never arrested, remaining in the lines of his Regiment, where the civil authorities of Kentucky were not permitted to arrest him.

November 16, 1862, ordered to Nicholasville, Ky. November 17, passing through Lexington, Ky., a mob attempted to take the officers' colored servants out of the Regiment; guns were loaded with ball catridges, bayonets fixed, and the officers' colored servants were not taken out of the Regiment.

November 26, 1862, ordered to Danville, Ky.; on the way drove the rear guard of Bragg's Army out of Camp Dick Robinson, capturing 800 barrels of pork, 500 stands of small arms, and one brass twelve pound cannon, and took post at Danville, Colonel Atkins commanding post. December 13, 1862, General Baird arrived at Danville, and assumed command of the post.

December 26, the entire command, under Major General Granger, marched to intercept John Morgan, on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad. Morgan deflected his march, and the command returned to Danville. January 13, 1863, Colonel Cochran having resigned, Colonel Atkins was assigned permanently to the command of the Brigade.

January 26, 1863, began the march to Louisville, with General Granger's Corps, thence by steamer to Nashville. Atkins' Brigade, occupying six steamers, convoyed by one gunboat, was ordered in advance to Smithland, at the mouth of the Cumberland, there to await further orders, arriving at night.

February 3, 1863, firing was heard at Fort Donelson. Without orders the Brigade pushed on, arriving there on the morning of February 4, in time to witness the withdrawal of the rebel forces, 8,000 strong, under Forrest and Wheeler, that had made a furious attack on Fort Donelson.

February 6, arrived at Nashville and camped south of the city.

March 5, marched to Franklin.

March 9, participated in the movements that drove Van Dorn south of Columbia.

March 27, took post with Brigade, and fortified Brentwood, where Colonel Bloodgood with 300 troops of Coburn's Brigade had been captured by Van Dorn's rebel cavalry.

April 8, 1863, Atkins' Brigade was relieved by Morgan's Division, and returned to Franklin. April 10, participated in the repulse of Van Dorn's cavalry, that made a furious attack on Franklin.

May 1, accompanied by a regiment of cavalry, reconnoitered the enemy at Spring Hill, pushing him south of the town.

June 1, 1863, with entire Corps, marched to Triune.

June 11, Forrest's cavalry made a bold and furious attack on Atkins' Brigade, but was repulsed, with considerable loss to the enemy.

June 23, 1863, marched to participate in the movements of Rosecrans' Army that resulted in the evacuation of Murfreesboro and Shelbyville by Bragg's Army. Participated in the engagement at Guy's Gap, and in the capture and taking charge of 505 rebel prisoners, and took post at Shelbyville.

July 1, 1863, Colonel Atkins, desiring to get out of General Granger's Corps, requested General Rosecrans to assign his Regiment to Wilder's Brigade of Mounted Infantry, armed with Spencer repeating rifles.

July 3, marched to Wartrace.

July 6, the Regiment was detached from Brigade, moved to Duck River, and rebuilt the wagon bridge destroyed by Bragg.

July 10, 1863, the Regiment was detached from General Granger's Corps, and assigned to Wilder's Brigade Mounted Infantry, Reynold's Division, Thomas' Corps, Army of the Cumberland.

July 22, 1863, a detachment of 200 of the Regiment joined an expedition under Colonel Funkhouser to scout the country for horses, and within four days captured 1,700 head of horses and mules, and 800 colored men, who were mustered into a colored regiment, the Ninety-second receiving horses sufficient to mount the entire Regiment.

August 16, 1863, the movement of Rosecrans' to flank Bragg out of Chattanooga began. The Ninety-second accompanied Wilder's Brigade over the mountains into the Tennessee Valley north of Chattanooga, driving in the rebe cavalry.

September 4, was detached from Wilder's Brigade to rejoin Rosecrans south of the Tennessee for scouting duty, and recrossed the mountains, crossed the Tennessee at Bridgeport, and reported to Rosecrans in the forenoon of September 8, in Trenton Valley, southwest of Chattanooga, and a detail under Captain Van Buskirk climbed up Lookout Mountain on the west side, by Nickajack trace, pushed the enemy off the mountain, and brought the first authentic intelligence to General Rosecrans that Bragg's Army had evacuated Chattanooga.

September 9, 1863, led the advance, driving the enemy off from Lookout Mountain, and was the first to enter Chattanooga. Was sent by General Crittenden up the Tennessee to Fire Island, to assist Wilder to cross.

September 11, received orders to report to General Rosecrans. On the march struck the enemy a mile north of Ringgold, and was furiously assaulted by the enemy under Forrest, and held him in check until Wilder came up with balance of Brigade, and pushed Forrest out of Ringgold and through Ringgold Gap; same day on march to Rossville repulsed an assault of the rebel cavalry on an infantry wagon train.

September 12, opened communication with General Thomas, and did all the scouting duty prior to the battle of Chickamauga; in that battle covered the retreat of the Brigade of Regulars, and joined Wilder on the extreme right; covered McCook's retreat to Chattanooga. Guarded the Tennessee River for 30 miles north of Chattanooga until October 27, when it recrossed the mountains to Bridgeport, and marched to Huntsville, Ala., for forage and winter quarters.

January 25, 1864, marched with Brigade, Colonel Atkins commanding, through Athens to Shoal Creek to intercept a rebel raid from the south of the Tennessee—met the first rebel column at Shoal Creek and turned it back across the Tennessee River. Two miles further west met the second rebel column, and, after hard fighting turned it back, killing the officer in command and capturing many prisoners, and the "orders" showing that the defeated column was to be joined by another at Athens the next morning. Returned to Athens in the night in time to turn back across the Tennessee River the third rebel column, defeating the combined rebel movement.

April 6, 1864, began march from Huntsville to Ringgold, Ga., to participate in the campaign on Atlanta, and was assigned to Murray's Brigade, Kilpatrick's Cavalry Division.

April 23, 1864, at daylight, the enemy attacked the Ninety-second picket, eight miles from camp, guarding a track over Waldon's Ridge; in overwhelming force the enemy surrounded the picket, and 33 out of 62 were killed, captured or wounded; 12 were shot down by the rebels, after they had surrendered and were disarmed.

The Regiment participated in all the movements of Kilpatrick's Cavalry, in the long campaign that resulted in the capture of Atlanta, and covered the left of Sherman's army, when it withdrew from Jonesboro.

October 1, 1864, Colonel Atkins, commanding Brigade, the Regiment marched with Division to uncover the movements of Hood's army; struck his rear at noon, Oct. 2, charged the enemy, and captured some of Hood's Infantry.

October 3, drove the enemy away from Powder River, built a bridge, crossed, and pushed the enemy into his strong earthworks at Powder Springs, demonstrating that Hood's entire army was in motion north and west, and participated in all the movements against Hood, until Sherman turned southward toward Savannah, Ga.

November 4, 1864, Kilpatrick's Division was reorganized, and the Ninety-second assigned to Atkins' Brigade, and participated in all the cavalry battles on the march through Georgia, and in the capture of Savannah.

Attached to General Atkins' Brigade, the Regiment participated in all the cavalry fighting on Sherman's march through the Carolinas, and against Jo Johnston's rebel army in North Carolina, until the close of the war.

During its term of service, the Ninety-second Regiment was in more than sixty battles and skirmishes.

It was mustered out at Concord, North Carolina, and paid and discharged from the service at Chicago, Ill., July 10, 1865.

HISTORY OF NINETY-THIRD INFANTRY.

The Ninety-third Infantry Illinois Volunteers was organized at Chicago, Ill., in September, 1862, by Colonel Holden Putnam, and mustered in October 13, 998 strong.

Was ordered to Memphis, Tenn., November 9, and arriving on the 14th, moved with General Grant's army, in the Northern Mississippi Campaign, to Yocona creek, and thence, via Lumpkin's Mills, to Memphis, arriving December 30. Marched again, immediately, to LaFayette, Tenn., and returned to Ridgway, where the Regiment remained during January and February, 1863.

Embarked for Lake Providence, March 3, and from thence moved to Helena, 10th. From thence moved down the river on the Yazoo Pass Expedition. Entered Moon Lake the 22d, and landed near Greenwood. After reconnoitering the enemy's position, re-embarked and returned to Helena. On the 13th of April, moved to Miliken's Bend, and, on the 25th, commenced the Vicksburg Campaign. Marched via Bruinsburg, Port Gibson, Raymond and Clinton, and arrived at Jackson, May 14. The Ninety-third was first under fire here. Participated in the advance, losing 3 killed and 4 wounded.

Remained at Jackson until the 15th, and then moved toward Vicksburg. On the 16th was engaged in the battle of Champion Hills.

The Ninety-third was in the Third Brigade, Seventh Division, Seventeenth Army Corps. At 2 o'clock p. m., Brigadier General Hovey's Division being severely pressed, the Brigade was ordered forward and placed on the extreme left. After 20 minutes' fighting it was flanked on the left, and, retiring steadily, changed front to the left. Being again flanked, it again retired, and in this position held its ground against a most furious attack, after which the enemy retreated to Black River Bridge. The loss of the Regiment was 1 officer and 37 men killed, 6 officers and 107 men wounded, and 1 officer and 10 men missing.

On the 17th, again moved toward Vicksburg. At noon, of the 19th, came on the enemy's line, about 3 miles from the city. On the 22d of May, was engaged in the assault on the enemy's works, on the left of Fort Fisher, losing 10 or 12 men killed and wounded. In the afternoon was ordered to re-enforce General McClernand's command, near the railroad. At 4 o'clock, p.m., charged the enemy. Loss in this charge, 5 enlisted men killed, and 1 officer and 49 enlisted men wounded. On the 22d of June, moved to the rear, and on July 4, was stationed at McCall's plantation.

July 13, 1863, started for Jackson. Arrived on the 15th, and immediately moved to Vicksburg, arriving the 25th. On the 12th of September, moved to Helena, Ark., and on the 30th, to Memphis. Moved to Glendale October 3. Marched to Barnsville, Miss., October 8. On the 19th, marched toward Chattanooga, via Iuka, Florence, Alabama, Winchester, Tenn., and Bridgeport, Ala., arriving November 19.

November 24, the Regiment crossed the Tennessee River, and threw up a tete de pont, occupying the works until the pontoon bridge was built, and November 25, was heavily engaged at Mission Ridge, losing Colonel Holden Putnam and 19 men killed, 1 officer and 41 enlisted men wounded, and 2 officers and 25 men missing. Pursued the enemy, November 26 and 27, to Grayson, and returned to Chattanooga. Moved toward Bridgeport, Ala., December 3. On the 22d, moved to Larkinsville, Ala., and January17, 1864, to Huntsville. On the 12th of February, participated in the reconnoissance to Dalton. On the 24th and 25th, lay in line of battle all day, near Dalton. Returned to Huntsville March 6.

Moved, by rail, to Decatur, Ala., and June 14th marched, via Huntsville and Larkinsville, to Stevenson, Ala., arriving on the 25th.

On the 27th, moved by rail to Chattanooga, and, 28th, to Kingston. One mile north of Dalton, the train collided with an up-train, and 1 officer and 30 men were wounded.

July 2d, moved to Etowah, to guard crossings, until 11th, when the Regiment returned to Kingston.

August 2d and 3d, marched to Allatoona. On the evening of the 15th, moved, by rail, to Resaca, and, on 17th, marched to Spring Place, but, Wheeler's cavalry having retreated, the command returned to Resaca and to Allatoona.

On the 3d of September, 10 men were captured while out foraging.

On the 5th of October, the Ninety-third was a part of the force, 2,100 strong, which so signally defeated General French's Rebel Division of 7,000. At one o'clock A. M., the picket firing commenced. At seven A. M. the artillery, on both sides, opened, and at nine A. M. the enemy made his first charge, and, after desperate fighting, succeeded in pressing the Union forces back, from the outer line of works, into the forts. Until three P. M., the battle raged with intense fury, when the enemy hastily withdrew, in the direction of Dallas. The Ninety-third lost 21 killed, 3 officers and 49 men wounded, and 10 missing.

On the 12th of November, 1864, the Regiment started on "the march to the seas" and marched, via Atlanta, McDonough, Jackson, Planter's Factory, Hillsboro, Clinton, Gordon, Irwinton, Summerville, and Eden, reaching the enemy's lines around Savannah, December 10th. On the 11th skirmished with the enemy at Ogeechee canal, losing 1 killed and 2 wounded. On the 12th, moved to "Station 1," on the Gulf Railroad, and remained till the 21st, when it marched into the city and there remained until January 19th, 1865.

Commenced the Campaign of the Carolinas on the 19th of January. Marched across the Savannah River and two miles into the swamp. On the 20th, returned to Savannah, and, 23d embarked for Beaufort, S. C. Landed on 24th, and, on 29th, marched northward, via McPhersonville, Hickory Hill, Owens' Cross Roads, Baneburg, Graham (destroying one and a half miles of railroad), Binnaker's Bridge, Orangeburg, Bates' Ferry, on the Congaree (where skirmished with the enemy 15th February), and to Columbia, arriving 17th. While here 1 man was mortally wounded by the accidental explosion of shells.

From Columbia, marched, via Muddy Springs, Peay's Ferry, on the Wateree, Liberty Hill, West's Corner (here had 1 man wounded by enemy's cavalry), to Cheraw, S. C.; thence, via Laurel Hill, Big Raft Swamp, Fayetteville, Jackson's Cross Roads, Cox's Bridge, and Bentonville, arriving at Goldsboro March 24th. On the 10th of April, moved to Raleigh, arriving 14th.

After the surrender of Johnson's army, marched, via Petersburg and Richmond, Va., to Washington City. Participated in the grand review May 24th, and on the 31st, moved to Louisville, Ky.

June 23d, 1865, mustered out of service, and, on the 25th, arrived at Chicago, Ill. Received final payment and discharge July 7th, 1865.

During two years and seven month's service, the casualties, in battle, of the Ninety-third were 446, and 1 officer and 31 men accidentally wounded.

The Regiment has marched 2,554 miles, traveled, by water, 2,296 miles, and by railroad 1,237 miles. Total, 6,087 miles.

HISTORY OF NINETY-FOURTH INFANTRY.

This Regiment had its origin in the magnificent burst of enthusiasm which greeted Mr. Lincoln's call for more men in the summer of 1862. It was organized, examined, inspected, mustered in and put into the field within ten days. It was composed entirely of residents of McLean county, and was usually called "the McLean Regiment." Largely through the exertions of the Hon. Isaac Funk and the Hon. Harrison Noble the county authorities gave each enlisted man a bounty of fifty dollars, and also presented the Regiment with a magnificent stand of colors, costing five hundred dollars. Nearly all the companies had an excess of men offered, and two companies raised simultaneously for the purpose of joining the Ninety-fourth were afterward mustered into other organizations. In several instances a father and two or three sons (in one case four) enlisted together, and there was a generous emulation who should do the most for the favorite organization. The full strength at muster-in was 945, and 149 recruits afterwards joined, making a total of 1,094. It lost 11 men killed in battle, had 45 wounded, 157 died, and 164 were discharged. The small percentage of loss, notwithstanding the active service and severe actions in which it participated, must be attributed to the rare skill displayed by Colouel McNulta in taking care of his men and preventing their unnecessary exposure in action, and to the very efficient medical staff, which was continually on the alert to secure the best sanitary regulations in camp, and assiduous in the care of the sick and wounded.

Colonel Orme being promoted to Brigadier General in November, 1862, the command of the Regiment was practically held by Colonel McNulta during the entire term of service.

Leaving Bloomington August 25, 1862, it was quartered for two weeks in Benton Barracks, where it was brigaded with the Nineteenth Iowa and Twentieth Wisconsin, forming the Second Brigade of the Third Division of what was at that time called the "Army of the Frontier," and designed to operate in Missouri and Arkansas. The Brigade was commanded by Colonel Orme and the Division by General F. H. Herron, the whole being commanded by General J. M. Schofield. Afterwards the Division became attached to the Thirteenth Army Corps, under McClernand.

On September 10th the Brigade was moved by rail to Rolla, Mo., and thence in a few days to Sprinfield, at that time upon the extreme front of the Union forces. Here six weeks were spent in the most assiduous company and battalion drills, the men being especially exercised in firing while lying down, and in the skirmish drill, in which they became remarkably proficient, and the results of which were very apparent when they came into action. The advantage of being able to deliver an accurate and rapid fire while lying down and almost entirely protected by the slightest irregularity of ground is obvious.

The territory lying south of Springfield was occupied by the Confederate General Hindman with a large force of troops, mostly irregular, which were suddenly concentrated about December 1st, and surrounded General Blunt at Cane Hill, in the northwest corner of Arkansas, and threatened him with annihilation. Upon receipt of intelligence of this occurence, the Second and Third Divisions made a forced march of 120 miles in 90 hours, and on the 7th of December attacked the whole force of the enemy, fully 30,000 strong, advantageously posted at Prairie Grove, near Fayetteville, Ark. Our troops numbered only about 4,000 men, the Second Division not having come up, yet they boldly attacked the enemy and "hammered" him until evening, when General Blunt broke through the small force which Hindman had left in his front, and, attacking the enemy on the flank, turned the fortunes of the day in our favor. In this engagement the Ninety-fourth held the extreme left of our line, and covered the road to Fayetteville by which the Second Division was coming to our assistance. Had they once given way, as several parts of the line did, at different times, before assaults of the enemy, the latter would have siezed the road, cut off our reinforcements, and had us at his mercy. Here the drill at Springfield proved its value. Scattered in a long, irregular line, lying flat on their faces, taking advantage of every stump, fence and irregularity of ground, the Regiment maintained so destructive a fire that no troops could be brought against them without being cut to pieces, while our men were comparatively unharmed. Colonel McNulta contributed largely to this result by riding constantly up and down the lines, urging the men to "lie close and fire low," utterly regardless of his own exposure. It was owing to this policy that our loss was so trifling—1 killed and 26 wounded—compared with regiments at our side who were not so well handled. The enemy retreated during the night, finding the Second Division coming up, and left us in possession of the field.

In about two weeks the Regiment took part in an expedition to VanBuren, on the Arkansas River, burning two Rebel steamers and making so imposing a display of strength that that part of the country was afterwards comparatively quiet. Returning through Missouri to near Rolla, the Regiment drilled and recruited until June, 1863, when it was sent down the river to Vicksburg, where it was stationed below the city on the left of our line, and assisted in all the siege operations terminating with the capture of that stronghold on the 4th of July. Here, again, the indefatigable McNulta was constantly among the men in the trenches, rapping them on the head when they needlessly exposed themselves, and keeping so sharp a lookout that, although exposed alternate days for two weeks to a hot fire in the trenches, and their camp almost constantly under the range of the enemy's shells, the Regiment only sustained a loss of 1 man killed and 5 wounded, showing how much a prudent and sagacious commander can do in preventing needless sacrifice of life.

After the surrender, the Regiment was sent on an expedition up the Yazoo, and on July 24th went down the river again, making brief stop at Port Hudson, to Carrollton, six miles above New Orleans. In the month of September it was sent up to Morganzia, and made a reconnoisance through the swamps of that delectable region, without any especial results except undergoing a severe shelling, during which Colonel McNulta was knocked off his horse by a piece of shell, and received injuries which since have resulted in permanent disability.

On October 25th, the Ninety-fourth embarked for the Rio Grande, where, at Brownsville and in that vicinity, the men spent nine of the most miserable months of their enlistment, the monotony only being relieved by an occasional revolution upon the Mexican side of the river at Matamoras, during one of which they were called on to spend a night upon the streets in that city guarding the American Consul.

Under the policy of concentration inaugurated by General Grant upon assuming chief command, in July, 1864, the Regiment was withdrawn from Texas, and during the first half of August took an active part in the siege of Fort Morgan, which surrendered on the 21st, after sustaining a most fearful bombardment from the fleet and mortars on shore. Another period of inaction following, only broken by a short expedition to Pascayoula, until the 17th of March, when the Brigade, as an independent command under Colon Bertram, of the Twentieth Wisconsin, who reported directly to General Granger, moved up the east side of Mobile Bay to take part in the siege of Spanish Fort, the key to the city Mobile. Here, as at Vicksburg, the Regiment held the extreme left of the line, and during thirteen days was constantly under fire, digging rifle-pits, trenches and mines; and here, as at Vicksburg, the constant care of their Colonel brought them through this memorable siege with a loss of only 1 killed and 3 wounded.

Participating in the final assault, they had the honor of being the first to mount the walls of Fort Alexis, at 10 o'clock P. M., April 8, 1865.

After the fall of Mobile, which followed that of Spanish Fort, the Ninety-fourth was sent to Ship Island in charge of a large number of prisoners, after which they went into camp on the "shell road," below Mobile, until June 18th, when they moved to Galveston, Texas, and did garrison duty until their muster-out, on the 17th of July, the Regiment reaching Bloomington on the 9th of August, being received with a superb ovation

The Ninety-fourth served just three years, marched 1,200 miles, traved by railroad 610 miles and by steamer 6,000 miles, took part in nine battles, sieges and skirmishes, and not one retreat.

HISTORY OF NINETY-FIFTH INFANTRY.

The Ninety-fifth Infantry was organized at Camp Fuller, Rockford, by Colonel Lawrence S. Church, and was mustered into the United States' service September 4, 1862. It was recruited from the counties of McHenry and Boone, three companies from the latter and seven from the former.

The Regiment moved from camp November 4, and proceeded via Cairo and Columbus to Jackson, Tenn., and afterward to Grand Junction, where it was assigned to General McArthur's Division, Army of the Tennessee. Colonel Church being compelled by feeble health to return home from Columbus, Lieutenant Colonel Humphrey was in command of the Regiment. Took part in General Grant's campaign in Northern Mississippi in the winter of 1862.

After the capture of Holly Springs by General Van Dorn, General Grant's Army took up its line of march for Memphis, starting soon after Christmas. The Ninety-fifth arrived at Moscow, a small town between LaGrange and Memphis, December 30. On the 1st day of January, 1863, it resumed the march, and on the 2d arrived at Collierville. Colonel Deitzler's Brigade, to which the Ninety-fifth was assigned, was ordered to halt here a few days prior to advancing on Memphis, during which time the regiments were mainly occupied in repairing and guarding the railroad. While remaining at this place the regiments were required to be up and in line of battle at 3 o'clock a. m. for several mornings in succession, watching for the enemy until daylight. The disaster which had occurred at Holly Springs made all commanders more watchful. On the 13th of January the Brigade moved forward to Memphis, arriving there in the afternoon, and went into camp three miles out from the city. The campaign thus closed in Northern Mississippi.

Simultaneously with the presence of General Grant's Army at Memphis a large fleet of transports was also collected at that point for the purpose of conveying the troops down the Mississippi river to operate against Vicksburg. These were ready by the 19th of January for the reception of General McArthur's Division, which was now designated as the Sixth Division of the Seventeenth Army Corps, commanded by Major General James B. McPherson. On that day the Ninety-fifth embarked upon the steamer Marie Denning. The Eleventh Iowa Infantry, Eightieth Wisconsin, and a company of the Second Illinois Artillery also embarked on this boat. Finally when the troops were loaded one long whistle sounded from General McArthur's flag boat, Platte Valley, as a signal for starting, the splendid fleet of 15 steamers swinging out into the stream, and were soon steaming down the river toward the subsequent scene of busy military operations around the Hill City of the South. The fleet landed each day before dark, lying at nights, and arrived at Milliken's Bend, 15 miles above Vicksburg, on the 26th of January. The troops disembarked on the following day, going into camp near the levee. Participated in the march to Grand Gulf, and all the battles between that place and the rear of Vicksburg. Was in the charges of May 19, before Vicksburg. A charge was ordered along our whole lines upon the enemy's works to take place at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and at the appointed hour the furious onset commenced. General Sherman's Fifteenth Army Corps occupied the right of the federal line resting on the river above Vicksburg, General McPherson's Seventeenth Army Corp held the center and the Thirteenth Corps, under General McClernand, held the left, extending nearly to the river on the south side of the city. The ground in front of General Ransom's Brigade and over which it charged at the time was located near the Jackson road on the right of the celebrated "White House" and near Fort Hill. The Ninety-fifth held an important position in the Brigade during this charge. While maintaining this position Colonel Humphrey received a congratulatory dispatch from General

Ransom. In this assault Colonel Humphrey received, early in the action, a wound in the foot, but remained with his command cheering on his men until he received orders to withdraw his Regiment, under the cover ot darkness, from this attack. The Ninety-fifth lost in this engagement 7 killed and 54 wounded.

Greneral Grant ordered the assault to be renewed on the 22d of May, and at 10 o'clock A. M., a furious charge began. The Ninety-fifth gained an advance position on the crest of the ridge near the enemy's works encountering one of the most sweeping and destructive fires to which troops were ever exposed. Captain Manzer, of Company C, and Captain Cornwell, of Company K, were killed; Major William Avery, Captain Cook, of Company D, Lieutenant Smith, of Company C, Lieutenant Sponable, of Company A, and Lieutenant Pierce, of Company I, were severely wounded. The total killed, wounded and missing in these two charges was 25 killed, 124 wounded and 10 missing.

After the unsuccessful charges of the 19th and 22d of May, the great siege began and was prosecuted vigorously all through the sultry days of May and June, and on the 4th of July, the Ninety-fifth was among the first regiments to enter the city.

On the 12th of July, General Ransom's Brigade was ordered to proceed to Natchez for the purpose of occupying that point. It arrived there on the following day and affected a landing without opposition. The Brigade remained at Natchez until the middle of October. While the Ninety-fifth was in camp at this place General McArthur, commanding the Division, paid the troops a visit and on invitation of Colonel Humphrey attended a dress parade of the Ninety-fifth. The General expressed himself greatly pleased with the appearance of the Regiment and he and his staff joined in the opinion that they had never witnessed a more perfect dress parade during the service.

About the middle of October the Brigade, now commanded by Brigadier General Thomas K. Smith, was ordered to Vicksburg. The Ninety-fifth remained at Vicksburg during the fall and winter, assisting in the construction of fortifications and performing garrison duty.

In the early party of February an expedition, consisting of the Sixteenth Army Corps, under Major General Hurlbut, and the Seventeenth, commanded by Major General McPherson, moved toward Jackson, taking different roads. The enemy were found in position 3 miles out from Jackson, but being routed the army moved as far as East Meridian, Miss., where important railroad communications, arsenals and confederate stores were detroyed. This expedition was absent about 20 days, and having accomplished its purpose returned to Vicksburg the latter part of February, 1864. The Ninety-fifth bore a conspicuous part in this march in the enemy's country.

The Ninety-fifth was temporarily detached from the Second Brigade, Seventeenth Army Corps and assigned to the Brigade made up for the Red River expedition, consisting of the Fourteenth Wisconsin, Eighty-first and Ninety-fifth Illinois, commanded by Colonel L. M. Ward. These troops left Vicksburg on the 9th of March to join the army under General Banks. The Ninety-fifth was engaged at the capture of Fort De Russey and in the battles of Old River, Cloutierville, Mansura, Yellow Bayou and all the movement of that advance and retreat.

In the battle of Bayou the rebels fought with desperation, losing 300 prisoners and many killed and wounded. The Sixteenth Corps was hotly engaged, and the Ninety-fifth fought during a portion of time under one of the severest fires of artillery it ever experienced in a field fight.

On the 22d of April the Ninety-fifth embarked at the mouth of Red River on the steamer Golden Era for Vicksburg, arriving there on the 23d. The Brigade to which the Ninety-fifth properly belonged was still at Vicksburg, but notwithstanding this the Regiment was sent to Memphis and assigned to a Brigade in which the Eighty-first and One Hundred and Thirteenth Illinois formed a part.

The Ninety-fifth was in the thickest of the fight at Guntown and fought with undaunted bravery. In the early part of the action Colonel Humphrey fell mortally wounded and the command devolved upon Captain William H. Stewart of Company F, but he, soon receiving a severe wound through both thighs, was carried helpless from the field. Next Captain E. N. Bush of Company G assumed command, but he was soon counted among the killed, when Captain Schellenger of Company K was called to the command of the gallant band, and though their brave Colonel and other commanders had fallen one after another, yet the figh was continued with indescribable desperation. Finally both flanks of the Regiment were turned by overpowering numbers of the enemy and it was obliged to fall back or suffer entire capture. Soon afterward a general and hasty retreat was ordered by General Sturgis, when his whole army fled precipitately in the direction of Memphis. The enemy, victorious at all points, lost no time in pursuit of the routed and demoralized troops. The remnant of the Ninety-fifth was led back to Memphis by Captain Schellenger, but amid the excitement each man looked out particularly for himself. In this engagement the Ninety-fifth was nearly annihilated, and on this account it was given a few weeks rest on its return to Memphis.

After recruiting the command, joined in August, General Mower. Moved up White River and marched from Brownsville through Arkansas to Missouri in pursuit of General Price. The Ninety-fifth arrived at Benton Barracks November 1.

November 30, moved to Nashville. Took part in the battle of Nashville December 15 and 16, and in pursuit of Hood's defeated army to the Tennessee River.

On December 18 the Ninety-fifth camped on the battle grounds of Franklin, moving thence to Columbia, thence to Pulaski and Lawrenceburg.

January 2, 1865, it moved up the river to Eastport.

HISTORY OF NINETY-SIXTH INFANTRY.

The Ninety-sixth Infantry Volunteers was recruites by companied, under the call of the President of the United States, during the months of July and August, 1862, and mustered into service as a Regiment at Camp Fuller, September 6, 1862.

Six companies, A, E, F, H, I and K, were from JoDaviess county, and four, B. C. D and G, from Lake county. The mustering into one Regiment of men from Lake, the northeastern county bordering Lake Michigan, and JoDaviess, the northwestern county on the banks of the Mississippi, although separated by a distance of two hundred miles, was but the reuniting of old friends, who, in the past, had been associated in the old first Congressional District of this State. The union proved one of lasting harmony and good comradeship, thereby increasing the efficiency of the Regiment.

The month of September was spent in arming, equipping and drilling the men for the field, much proficiency being made therein.

October 6, the Rebel forces under General Braxton Bragg being on the march toward Louisville, Kentucky, and those under General Kirby Smith threatening Cincinnati, O. orders were received to hold the men in readiness to move on short notice.

October 8, orders were received to proceed at once to the defense of Cincinnati. By noon the Regiment, under command of Colonel Thomas E. Champion, was on the cars and at midnight on the 10th was at its destination. Crossing the Ohio River on pontoons and reporting to Major General Gordon Granger it was assigned a position in the batteries in front of Covington and Newport, Ky.

The first real duty of a soldier was here performed and within sound of the enemy's guns. The Regiment was attached to and became a part of the Second Brigade. Third Division of the Army of Kentucky, the Division being under the command of that courteous gentleman and thorough soldier Brigadier Gene~al Absalom Baird, of the regular army, and the Brigade under Colonel Cochran, of the Fourteenth Kentucky Infantry.

October 19, Lieutenant Colonel Isaac L. Clarke, with Companies A, E, F, G and H, was ordered to the front via. Falmouth, as escort to a commissary train, and on the 29th, Colonel Champion was ordered with the other five companies to proceed to Lexington, Kentucky, which point was reached November 4, the detachment under Lieutenant Colonel Clarke being already there.

November 14, the Regiment moved to Harrodsburg, where it remained guarding rebel prisoners taken at Perryville until the 28th, when it proceeded to join the Division at Danville, leaving Companies A and E under Captain George Hicks, for some six weeks longer.

December 26, moved out toward Lebanon Junction to intercept General John H. Morgan, but the enemy escaping, the command returned to Danville, where it remained until January 26, 1863, when orders were received to join the Army of the Cumberland, near Murfreesboro, Tenn. Tents were immediately struck and the troops, the Second Brigade being then under the command of Colonel Smith D. Atkins, Ninety-second Illinois, marched to Louisville, Ky. Arriving at Louisville January 31, the Division embarked on steamers going down the Ohio River to Smithland at the mouth of the Cumberland River, thence up the Cumberland to Nashville, Tenn., under the convoy of gunboats.

Reaching Ft. Donelson the night of February 3, the gunboats were attacked by General Wheeler, who, assaulting the Eighty-third Illinois, then in garrison, was handsomely repulsed. Troops were landed but were not engaged, as the enemy retreated hastily.

February 7, arrived at Nashville, Tenn., disembarked on the 8th, and went into camp south of the city, until March 5, when the Brigade proceeded to Franklin, 18 mile south, to reinforce the First Brigade under Colonel John Coburn then engaged at Spring Hill.

March 9 to 12, skirmished with the enemy under General Van Dorn, driving him south of Duck River, after which the command returned to camp at Franklin.

March 27, ordered to Brentwood in rear of Franklin, where the Ninety-sixth and Ninety-second Illinois threw up a strong line of field works. Returned to Franklin April 8. The Brigade was here attacked by General Van Dorn, April 10, but repulsed with some loss. On the night of April 16, while the Regiment was on picket, Company F was attacked and one man, James M. Scott, killed.

June 2, the Division marched to Triune, Tenn., and on the 11th skirmished with the enemy under General Wheeler.

June 14, the Army of Kentucky was reorganized and made a part of the Reserve Corps of the Army of the Cumberland, the Ninety-sixth being assigned to the First Brigade, First Division of said Corps, our commanders being the same, Colonel Smith D. Atkins, of the Ninety-second Illinois, Brigade Commander, Brigadier General A. Baird, Division Commander, and Major General Gordon Granger commanding the Corps.

June 23, the Division joined the right wing of the Army operating against the rebel forces under General Bragg, passing through Salem, and across Stone River in the face of the enemy and during a terrible storm.

At Walnut Grove Church, the Ninety-sixth was detached to escort a large body of rebel prisoners to the rear. Having delivered the same to the commander at Murfreesboro, the Regiment rejoined its Brigade on the Shelbyville Pike.

July 1, entered Shelbyville, Tenn., having driven the enemy out of his strong line of earthworks, through the city and across Duck River.

July 3, marched to Wartrace, through heavy storm, and there went into camp.

July 6, Colonel Smith D. Atkins having secured the assignment of his Regiment to the mounted Infantry, Colonel Thomas E. Champion became the Brigade Commander.

August 12, the Brigade marched to Elk River, near Estell Springs. General James B. Steedman was here assigned to the command of the Division, General Baird having been granted a leave of absence by reason of ill health, and General Walter C. Whittaker to the command of the Brigade.

Remained at Elk River and vicinity until September 7, when the Ninety-sixth Regiment, together with all the troops of the Reserve Corps that could be spared from guarding the railroad, three and one-half Brigades (14 Regiments of Infantry and 3 batteries of Light Artillery) were collected and hurried forward to reinforce General Rosecrans, now south of the Tennessee River.

September 12, reached Bridgeport, Ala., crossed the Tennessee River and bivouacked on the south side.

September 13 and 14, forced march on south side of river and across Lookout Mountain to Rossville, Ga., a distance of 40 miles over mountainous roads, in less than 36 hours.

September 18, moved out on Ringgold Road to McAfee Church and engaged the enemy, losing Corporal Elisha Haggert, Co. D, killed, and several men wounded. The fighting continued the 19th, with the loss of Captain Charles E. Rowan, captured, and several men wounded, but not until Sunday, September 20, did the Regiment receive its full baptism of blood, and then, on the right of the historic field of Chickamauga.

About 11 o'clock A. M., September 20, 1863, General Steedman, leaving but one Brigade to cover the ground assigned him, and without orders gathered up the two and one half Brigades of 10 Regiments and 2 Batteries, and hurried to the support of General Thomas, 4 miles distant. Reporting to Thomas, he was assigned to the left center, but before becoming engaged, finding the enemy were endeavoring to turn his right. General Steedman was ordered to that flank, where at 1 P. M., he was engaged and before night had set in that brave soldier and Christian gentleman, Lieutenant Colonel Isaac L. Clarke, was killed. Lieutenant Nelson R. Simms and George F. Barnes mortally wounded, Captains A. Z. Blodgett and William F. Taylor, Lieutenant William Vincent, B. G. Blowney, S. B. Funk and Theodore F. Clarkson severely wounded, and 220 of the rank and file, over 50 per cent of the men engaged, were killed, wounded or missing, but the command held the ground upon which it had fought Longstreet's veterans so gallantly, and only left the line when night closed the battle.

On the 21st, the Division held Mission Ridge near Rossville, where the Ninety-sixth lost two companies, after a determined resistance, C and H, under command of Lieuteuants Charles W. Earle and Charles H. Yates, they being left on picket when the army fell back that night to Chattanooga.

September 23, Brigade ordered to Moccasin Point, north side of Tennessee River, and opposite Lookout Mountain. Here the men were subject to artillery and picket firing daily, from the enemy on and around the point of the mountain.

October 9, the army was re-organized, the reserve corps broken up and distributed to other commands, the Ninety-sixth regiment assigned to the Second Brigade, First Division Fourth Army Corps, Army of the Cumberland, with which it continued until mustered out, of service at close of war.

During much of the time while on Moccasin Point the weather was exceedingly bad, the men sadly in want of clothing, camp equipage and rations. One-fourth rations were issued for some time, and on the morning of October 26, when under orders for Brown's Ferry, one ear of corn was issued to each officer and man for the day's rations.

October 27, crossed the river into Wauhatchie Valley, returning to bivouac on the Point; re-crossed on the 29th to support General Hooker, in which engagement the Regiment lost several men. Returning to the Point again, to remain but a few days, as on November 1, the Division now under the command of Major General David S. Stanley. General Walter C. Whittaker commanding the Brigade, took up its line of March on the south side of the Tennessee River for Shellmonnd, Tenn., and the Regiment was placed on out post duty in Nickajack Core, Ga. The troops were here more comfortable than on Moccasin Point, being in receipt of full rations and an abundance of clothing.

November 20, six days rations were issued; reconnoitered the enemy's line. The 23d, marched up the Wauhatchie and joined the column for the storming of Lookout Mountain, crossing Lookout Creek at daylight of the 24th; ascended the mountain and moved forward, driving the enemy. The Ninety-sixth was then ordered to the extreme right, on the front line; climbing up the mountain side, to where it rises perpendicularly, the Regiment was rapidly advanced; flanking the enemy's works, pouring a destructive fire down the rifle pits, which caused the rebels to give way and fall back to the point near Craven's House, when night coming on, the enemy evacuated the mountain. Our loss was quite severe in this action.

The next morning the Ninety-sixth Illinois and Eighth Kentucky were ordered to advance and occupy the mountain, which they held until December 1, when orders were received to return to out-post duty at Nickajack Core, where the Regiment remained until January 26, 1864. The Ninety-sixth was then ordered to cover the working party repairing the East Tennessee Railroad. Reached Blue Springs February 7, where it camped until the 22d, and then joined the column operating against the enemy in front of Dalton. Moved to the extreme left of the army on the 25th, took position in front line and was heavily engaged all day in the action known as "Buzzard Roost," after which skirmished until the 28th, when the Regiment returned to camp at Blue Springs, having lost several men during this reconnoissance.

March 1, ordered to Cleveland to fortify and garrison, remaining there until April 23, when camp was broken and the Regiment again joined to its command, preparatory to commencing the Atlanta campaign.

May 3, 1864, moved with command; engaged the enemy on the 9th at Rocky Face Ridge, loosing heavily; entered Dalton on the 13th; engaged again at Resaca on the 14th and 15th with heavy loss. Skirmished with the enemy on the 19th and drove him through Kingston, south of which the army rested until the 24th. Engaged at New Hope Church on the 25th, and again, from the 27th to June 5, in the rifle pits in front of Dallas.

June 10th and 11th, skirmishing, and in action on the 14th at Pine Mountain, where the rebel general, Bishop Polk, was killed.

15th to 19th, marching and fighting. 20th and 27th, assault on Kenesaw Mountain, in which the Regiment lost heavily—Colonel Champion and Lieutenant Colonel Smith being severely wounded, and Captains Gilmore and James mortally.

July 3d and 4th, skirmishing and in action at Smyrna camp ground. Crossed the Chattahoochie River on the 12th. In action on the 19th and 20th at Peach Tree Creek. July 27th General Stanley was assigned to command of Fourth Corps, and General Nathan Kimball to the command of our Division. From this time until August 25th under continuous fire in front of Atlanta, and on the 31st in action at Rough and Ready.

September 1st and 2d engaged in battle of Jonesboro and Lovejoy's Station, and skirmished until the 6th, losing several men in action. Atlanta having been captured, the Regiment returned to camp near the city, where it remained until October 3d, when the march back to the Tennessee River was commenced, camping on many of the battle fields of the campaign.

From Chickamauga the command crossed to Pulaski, Tenn., which place was reached November 3d. On the 23d Hood appeared before Pulaski, and the march for Nashville began. Franklin was reached on the 30th, where the Regiment was again engaged in desperate battle.

Falling back December 1st to Nashville the Ninety-sixth was in front of the enemy doing picket duty until December 15th, when the battle of Nashville began and continued two days, during which time the Regiment behaved gallantly—carried the enemy's line near Franklin Pike, planted the first colors on his earthworks, and captured a battery of twelve pound Napoleons, together with prisoners far exceeding their own number. The loss was quite heavy in killed and wounded in this action. Joining a pursuit of the remnant of Hood's command to the Tennessee River, the Ninety-sixth exchanged the last infantry shots with the enemy. The Regiment reached Athens January 4, 1865. From thence marched to Huntsville, Ala., and there camped until March 15th, when it moved to Bull's Gap and Shield's Mills in East Tennessee. Here the Regiment was employed in scouting until the surrender of Lee's army, shortly after which the command was ordered to Nashville, en route for Texas to operate against the rebels under Kirby Smith. Arriving at Nashville it was learned that Smith had surrendered to General Canby, which closed out the last rebel army, and the muster out of troops commenced. The following accompanied the order of muster out:

HEADQUARTERS FIRST DIVISION, FOURTH ARMY CORPS,
CAMP HARKER, TENN., June 1, 1865.

Brevet Colonel J. C. SMITH, commanding Ninety-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry:

You, with the officers and men of the Ninety-sixth Illinois, after three years' gallant devotion to the cause of our common country in this war against rebellion, are now about to return to your homes, with honor unstained and with reputation bright with glory. Your deeds will live forever. In nearly every battle of the southwest you have been engaged, from Fort Donelson, through Shiloh, Corinth, Perryville, Stone River, Chickamauga, Resaca, Rockyface, Dallas, New Hope, Franklin and Nashville—you have borne the flag of the Union and the banner of your noble State to victory over the foe who would have destroyed the Government and Union made by our fathers. God has given you the victory. Remember Him. And now, that the war is over, the rebelllion at an end, remember those whom you have conquered. Use victory as becomes true men and brave soldiers. Return to your homes with enmity toward none and charity for all.

I know that you will be the best of citizens, because I know that you have been the best of soldiers. While we, enjoying the honor and privileges which your valor has won and saved, let us ever cherish as idols of our hearts the memory of our comrades who have given up their lives for the salvation of our country—who fell by your sides battling for the right. Remember the widow and orphan of our dead comrades. Be true to them as our comrades were true to us and our country.

My comrades, accept my gratitude for your devotion to me personally; you have been true and noble soldiers, and brave men. May God ever bless you and crown your lives with happiness, and each of you with honor, peace and plenty. Be as you have ever been—true to God, to country, friends, and to yourselves.

Good bye, comrades; again, God bless you.

NATHAN KIMBALL,
Brevet Major General.

HEADQUARTERS FIRST DIVISION, FOURTH ARMY CORPS.
DEPARTMENT OF THE CUMBERLAND,
CAMP HARKER, TENN., June 9, 1865.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 115.

The enlisted men of the Ninety-sixth Regiment Illinois Infantry, whose term of service does not expire prior to October 1, 1865, are assigned to the Twenty-first Regiment Illinois Infantry. The Assistant Commissioner of Musters of this Division will prepare the necessary rolls for this purpose.

By command of Major General Kimball.

ED. D. MASON,
Brevet Lt. Col. and A. A. General.

June 11th, the Regiment was ordered to Camp Douglas, Ill., for final pay and muster out of the United States service, where it arrived on the 14th, received pay on the 29th, and on the 30th day of June, 1865, the Ninety-sixth Regiment Illinois Infantry Volunteers had passed into history, after an eventful existence of three years, rendered historic by deeds written in blood on many a battle field. The sufferings and privations of the brave men of the Ninety-sixth Regiment Illinois Volunteers can be best understood when their casualties are remembered, the battles in which they were actively engaged recounted, and the number of miles traveled are known; and not even then can their devotion and sacrifice to their country be sufficiently appreciated.

A careful estimate of the distances traveled from the time the Regiment left Camp Fuller, Rockford, Ill., October, 1862, until its return and muster-out at Camp Douglas, Chicago, June, 1865, shows over 5,000 miles marched or transported in the service of the United States.

Killed or died of wounds or disease	190
Missing in action	78

HISTORY OF NINETY-SEVENTH INFANTRY.

This Regiment was organized at Camp Butler in August and September, 1862. During its stay there the men as they came in were put to an almost constant drill, and the Regiment was mustered in on the 16th of September. On or about the 1st of October it was ordered to the field, and proceeded to Covington, Ky., where it was incorporated in the army that marched from that place southward to the relief of a federal column at Cumberland Gap. It went as far as Nicholasville, when it was learned that the object of the march was accomplished. Then went to Louisville, where it was embarked on the way to Memphis, Tenn. At this place it became part of the Army of the Tennessee, as left wing, under command of General W. T. Sherman. On the 20th of December, 1862, it was again put on board of steamers and proceeded with the rest of the army down the Mississippi, with Vicksburg as the objective point.

CHICKASAW BLUFFS.

On the 27th of December the army landed on the left bank of the Yazoo River, and at once moved for the enemy at Chickasaw Bluffs. Right here the men of the Ninety-seventh were put to the first severe test, but they stood the ordeal without flinching, promising much for the future. The Ninety-seventh formed the extreme right of the army, with pivot on the Mississippi River. During the nights of December 31, 1862, and January 1, 1863, the army retreated from its position and retired upon the Yazoo, the Ninety-seventh Illinois bringing up the rear. About daylight the men were all on board and a few hours afterwards were landed at Young's Point.

Insidious diseases began to show themselves right away, the result of the miasmatic atmosphere of the Yazoo country. From the Point the Ninety-seventh, with the rest of the command, was taken to Milliken's Bend, where Major General John A. McClernand assumed command.

ARKANSAS POST.

A sharp battle was needed to retrieve the moral of the army. McClernand saw this at once, and "sniffing" Churchill, the rebel, from afar, he at once moved his command to Arkansas Post, on the Arkansas River, where it arrived on the evening of January 10, 1863. In contrast with our position at Chickasaw Bluffs, the Ninety-seventh occupied the extreme left, with pivot on the Arkansas River. The next day the rebel works were stormed, and Churchill, with 5,000 prisoners, captured. To the honor of the Ninety-seventh be it said that they were the first organization in the works, their duty being to enter the casemated fort Hindman.

YOUNG'S POINT.

Two days afterwards the men returned to their boats, re-embarked and steamed down for Young's Point, where they arrived on the 22d. Diseases of all kinds prevailed here; small-pox especially playing sad havoc with the men. While there, the Regiment done its share of the work on the "cut off" of the Mississippi.

March the 6th the camp at the Point had become untenable; it was more of a grave yard than anything else, and the main part of the army was taken by boats to Milliken's Bend. General grant had by this time assumed command. Picket duty every day and night in the canebrakes of Louisiana with now and then a drill was the way the army improved its opportunity at the Bend until April 15, when as fine an army as ever faced a foe moved upon Hard Times Landing, opposite Grand Gulf. The name of this place was prophetic of what was to follow for the next three months. During the night of April 30 the Ninety-seventh crossed the Mississippi at Bruinsburg, and with the balance of the Thirteenth Army Corps, of which it was a part, it at once set out on the march to Vicksburg.

PORT GIBSON.

By nine in the morning of the 1st of May we had marched 18 miles, and our advance met the rebel outposts. The battle of Port Gibson had commenced. The Regiment bore its full share of that spirited engagement, which lasted for the remainder of the day. At night the men slept under the guns of a Federal battery and slept soundly, too, while the cannons kept up a desultory fight in front. It was expected that the engagement would be renewed in the morning, but the rebels had fled. Port Gibson had been fought and won. Then the march continued, the Federal camps often occupying the very places occupied by the rebel camps the night before.

BALDWIN FERRY.

On the 8th of May the Regiment was detached from the army and sent to the Black River all by itself at Baldwin's Ferry, fully fifteen miles away from the army. The object was to prevent the Rebel General Tilghman's brigade from crossing the ford at that place. He did not cross. But a few of the men of the Ninety-seventh were picked up by the enemy. On the 10th it was ordered to fall back upon the main column, which it did, and at once moved with the army on to

CHAMPION HILLS.

Strange as it may seem, here again the Regiment was on the extreme left. This was a fierce battle in which the Regiment had the not very pleasant duty, among other duties, of being the target for rebel artillery for at least two hours at a distance of not over eight hundred yards. This was on the 15th of May.

The next morning with the rest of the army we moved on to the

and took part in the fight at this place. The same night we crossed the river on pontoons and bivouacked on the rebel side in the hearing of the rebel bugles and drums in full retreat upon their stronghold.

VICKSBURG.

The 19th, 20 and 22d of May the Regiment took part in the charges and never failed to go as far as any other organization, and as a rule much farther. On the 22d some of the men even went in the ditch of the fort right east of the railway from Vicksburg to Jackson, and one of the men went right into Vicksburg, where of course he was captured. In short, from the 19th of May to the 4th of July, with the rest of the army, the Ninety-seventh accomplished its full share of the great work, and for forty-five consecutive days remained by day and night exposed to the most destructive fire.

JACKSON.

After the surrender the Ninety-seventh, with the rest of the Thirteenth Army Corps, at once moved on to Jackson. Here again it took part in the contest and distinguished itself sufficiently to be praised by Major General W. T. Sherman, commanding the expeditionary army. After the fall of this place the Regiment was ordered to Vicksburg, and on August 25 it was sent with the Corps to New Orleans. We landed at Carrollton on the 27th, and for the first time in nearly one year the men of the Ninety-seventh were going to have a moment's rest and pleasure.

RESTING ON THEIR LAURELS.

The place of honor for camp was contested at this place between the Thirteenth and the Nineteenth Corps, the latter all eastern men, the former all western men. The best drilled Regiment was to win the prize for the Corps, and the Ninety-seventh Illinois Volunteers won the prize. There is no need to speak of New Orleans to the men of the Ninety-seventy; they will never forget it: it is the one reminiscence of their war experience in which they were in no immediate danger of being shot for the conquests they made. War has its vicissitudes; but at Carrollton the Ninety-seventh enjoyed blissful peace.

But men will weary even of the "Delights of Capua," and the Regiment rejoiced when on the 3d of October they embarked on board of steamers to be carried accross the river to Algiers on the way to on the bay by that name. A large number of pretty girls were at the landing bidding sweet farewell to the hateful yankees. The very best of soldiers will make ravages, even into the hearts of rebel maidens. When the boat left the landing, the band recalled the men to duty, to home and country, by playing "The Girl I Left Behind Me," and the boat glided away and along in front of the Crescent City, swiftly but gently, as if proud of carrying her charge. And in the distance handkerchiefs were still seen waving on the levee at Carrollton.

The next day the army was at Berwick City and it at once crossed the bay, proceeding on its march in the beautiful valley of the Teche to take part in the

WESTERN LOUISIANA CAMPAIGN.

The Regiment proceeded with the army as far as New Iberia, when on November 1, or thereabouts, it was ordered back to New Orleans for provost guard duty. None but the very best and most trusty regiments were ever used for such a purpose, especially in a city like New Orleans, where the spirit of rebellion was incarnate.

A TERRIBLE HOLOCAUST.

On November the 3d, while the Regiment was on the cars on its way to New Orleans' a collision took place, within forty miles of Algiers. It was a terrible disaster, the equal of a bloody battle in casualties, the Regiment losing eighteen (18) killed and sixty-seven (67) wounded. It was thought at the time that it was a conspiracy. An investigation was held on the subject, but without results.

On the 9th of November the Regiment took up quarters in a cotton pen on Tchapitoulas street. By this time the Regiment was only the skeleton of a regiment, the Vicksburg campaign and the railroad disaster leaving it barely with four hundred men for duty. Officers were sent north on recruiting service and it was not long before the Ninety-seventh again approximated a full muster. The officers and men performed their garrison duty to the great satisfaction of the military authorities.

On the 4th of March, 1864, the Regiment took part in the inauguration of Gov. Michael Hahm, the first Governor of Louisiana as a free State; and on the 23d of the same month it was passed in review by Gov. Richard Yates, then on a visit to the Illinois soldiery in the Division of the Gulf.

MORGANZIA.

In May, 1864, the Regiment being its own self once again in point of numbers, was sent to join the troops at Morganzia Bend. It camped along the levee, and the time here as at Milliken's Bend was devoted to picket duty and drill of the most elaborate kind. Sometime during the month we marched to the

some twenty miles distant. It was good and dark when we approached the river, and as we descended the slight declivity leading to the river, all of a sudden rebel artillery opened fire upon us from the other side of the river. No damage was done, however, as the levee protected us. We bivouacked along the levee, lying on our guns, prepared for any emergency. The next morning a most spirited fusilade took place between the two sides of the river at very close range. We had no artillery, while the rebels had a couple of pieces with which they had done poor execution, although creating trouble by breaking tree-tops over the heads of our men. At two o'clock in the afternoon the trouble had ended, the rebels having withdrawn. The next day we returned to Morganzia Bend, and in September following we were taken by boats to Dauphine Island by way of New Orleans, and .henc to Pascagoula. The

had begun. Soon after our landing we marched toward Mobile, and with great difficulty proceeded along, because of the swampy condition of the country and the almost incessant rains. When within twenty miles of Mobile rebel outposts were met, and such a resistance made against our further advance that the general commanding did not see fit to push the matter to a finish. We fell back to Honey Hill, some ten miles of Pascagoula, where we fortified our position. Some time afterwards we retired to Pascagoula, where we remained until the 1st of February, 1865, when we again went on board of steamers and were taken to

BARRANCAS.

At this place we remained until March the 20th, when under command of General Steele, the portion of the Thirteenth Army Corps at this place started on the march northward across the swamps of Florida and Alabama, with a view of falling upon Mobile from the north. This march was full of hardships and dangers, and on the 25th the Regiment was ordered forward on double quick to assist in a cavalry fight that took place not far from the Escambia. The engagement was over before we reached the place.

On the 26th, the next day, the Regiment was sent across the Escambia river to Pollard, some six or seven miles away. The bridges had all been destroyed and the Regiment performed the unparalleled feat of crossing a river at least two hundred feet wide, and full to overflow, on a solitary trestle that remained dangling in the air some fifty feet above the water. The trestle was all that remained of a beautiful and expensive railroad bridge. And all this, too, with the expectation of being fired upon at any moment by the enemy. As soon as we got across, we formed as skirmishers and proceeded to Pollard. The enemy had just left and we retired after the main column south of the Escambia. It was a hard days work for the men. The next day we continued our tramp, and on April 2 we struck the rebel outposts at

BLAKELY.

We at once invested the place and began siege works .They were pushed forward rapidly, and within a week we had our three parallels finished and were within one thousand yards of the rebel works. On the 9th of April, at 4 o'clock, the general commanding had decided to storm the rebel works and the Ninety-seventh was selected to lead the assault. Promptly the men were in the rifle pits with rifles instead of with pick and shovel. It was a quarter to five when the commanding officer of the Ninety-seventh gave the command, and the whole Regiment, as one man, with a deafening hurrah, rose above the works, and with a gallantry seldom equalled in the annals of war, started on their dangerous mission. Twenty minutes afterwards they were in Blakely and five thousand rebels and thirty-five pieces of heavy artillery, still hot of their deathly work, were captured. Eighty (80) killed and wounded in the Ninety-seventy were the human price of the victory, besides the losses of other Regiments that followed the Ninety-seventh. The same night the Regiment slept in the main fort and General E. R. S. Canby, commanding the military Division of the Gulf, sent the following note to the commander of the Regiment: "Thank you! May God bless you and your brave boys."

FORWARD NINETY-SEVENTH! CHARGE!

And Mobile was virtually ours. On the 15th our forces entered the place. The Thirteenth Army Corps was at once sent up to Selma, Ala., in boats. On May 1, at one in the morning, the Regiment was ordered to move at once on board a steamer; two hours afterwards they were on board. The instructions to the commanding officer were to proceed to Cahawba, some distance down the river, to effect a landing by surprise, and to proceed with all speed to Marion Junction to intercept a train on which was supposed to be Jefferson Davis, and also to bring in all the cattle and horses that could be found.

We landed at

CAHAWBA.

Before daylight, and before a soul knew of our arrival, we had possession of the place and captured the horses of several rebel cavalry. Men of the Ninety-seventh were mounted on these, and with a handful of men the commanding officer at once set out for Marion Junction, which was to be reached before half past nine in the morning, and as it was fifteen miles away, three was no time to lose. The Major wasIleft in command of the remainder of the Regiment for foraging purposes. Within two miles of Marion we were fired upon by a rebel ambuscade, and at once gave chase. They retreated into Marion, giving the alarm. We burned the depot at the Junction, tore up the track and fell back to Cahawba. The next day we returned to Selma with a large number of horses and cattle. This was, no doubt, the last shooting done during the war; at least it is certain that the men of the Ninety-seventh were never more fired upon.

On the 12th of May we returned to Mobile; thence we were sent to Galveston, where, on the 29th of July, 1865, the Ninety-seventh was mustered out and proceeded homeward by way of New Orleans and the Mississippi River to East St. Louis, which place was reached on the morning of the 19th of August; thence it took the cars for Springfield, Ill., and reached the capital the same night, after an absence of three years, less a few days.

The hardest thing of all to the men was their farewell to the battle flag, for the honor and in defense of which so many had given up their lives, whilst every man would have willingly died for it. No rebel hand ever touched it, even though rebel lead and shot and fire have left but little of its glorious folds; it, too, with the bloom and life of the Regiment, paid its tribute to the cause—to the sacred cause which both symbolized. Other Illinois regiments may have been the equals of the Ninety-seventh, none have been its superiors.

May its memory, may the memory of all, grow green with the lapse of ages, and may generations to come never forget the deeds of their fathers.

HISTORY OF NINETY-EIGHTH INFANTRY.

The Ninety-eighth Infantry Illinois Volunteers was organized at Centralia, Ill., September, 1862, by Colonel John J. Funkhouser, and mustered in September 3.

September 8, 1862, the Regiment was ordered to Louisville, Ky. At Bridgeport, Ill., whilst en route, the train was thrown from the track by a misplaced switch, and Captain O. L. Kelly and seven men killed, and 75 wounded. On the 9th, moved to camp Jo Holt, at Jeffersonville. On 19th, moved to Shepherdsville. On 30th, moved to Elizabethtown, and, from thence moved to Frankfort, arriving October 9. On 11th, moved to Versailles, from which the enemy retreated, leaving 200 sick in hospital; and, on 13th, returned.

The Regiment was in Fortieth Brigade, Seventy-second and Seventy-fifth Indiana, Ninety-eighth Illinois, and Thirteenth Indiana Battery; Colonel A. O. Miller, Seventy-second Indiana, commanding; Twelfth Division, Brigadier General Dumont commanding; Army of Ohio. On October 26, the Brigade marched, via Bardstown, Mumfordsville and Glasgow, to Bowling Green, arriving November 3.

November 10, 1862, moved with Brigade and Division to Scottsville; 25th, to Gallatin; 28th, to Castillian Springs, and, December 14, to Bledsoe Creek. General Reynolds took command of the Division, December 23. The Seventeenth Indiana was assigned to the Brigade—Colonel Wilder, of that Regiment taking command of the Brigade. On 26th December, began march northward, in pursuit of Morgan, arriving, 31st, at Glasgow.

January 2, 1863, marched to Cave City, and, on the 4th, moved to Nashville. From thence marched to Murfreesboro, 6th. On 14th, the Regiment was assigned to First Brigade, Fifth Division, Fourteenth Army Corps. Brigade composed of Seventeenth and Seventy-second Indiana, One Hundred and Twenty-third and Ninety-eighth Illinois, January 24, moved through Bradyville, and, on 25th, returned.

On the 8th of March, the Ninety-eighth was ordered to be mounted. During the winter and spring of 1863, it had been doing guard duty for forage trains and on scouts. On 14th March, 350 men were mounted. Shortly afterward the whole Brigade was mounted. On the 1st of April, moved out on an eight days' scout, going to Rome, Lebanon and Snow's Hill, and returned.

On April 13, moved to Lavergne and Franklin, and returned the next day. Moved to McMinnville, April 20, and destroyed a cotton factory and captured a railroad train. On 22d and 23d, moved, by way of Liberty, to Alexandria, and joined General Reynold's command. On 27th, moved to Lebanon, having captured a large number of horses and mules. 29th, returned to Murfreesooro.

May 6, the One Hundred and Twenty-third Illinois was assigned to the Brigade, and mounted in place of the Seventy-fifth Indiana.

On May 23, made a reconnoissance to the front, driving in the enemy's pickets, killing two and wounding four. On the 31st, the Regiment was armed with the Spencer repeating rifle.

June 4, moved out on the Liberty road, and attacked the First Kentucky and Eleventh Texas rebel cavalry, capturing 20 prisoners and five wagons. Moved, June 16, to Dark Bend, on the Tennessee. On the 10th, attacked the enemy at Liberty, driving their rear guard of 150 men to Snow's Hill.

On 24th June, moved, with the Army of the Cumberland, to attack the enemy. The Ninety-eighth Mounted Infantry, on the right flank, came upon the enemy at Hoover's Gap, repulsing them—the Regiment losing one man killed and five wounded.

From June 24 to 28, moved flank of Fourth Division, cutting the railroad at Decherd, and driving the enemy from the stockades. Returned to Manchester. July 1. From July 1st to 16th of August, was in the vicinity of Wartrace and Decherd, and captured over 1,000 horses and mules.

The Ninety-second Illinois, Colonel Atkins, was assigned to the Brigade.

On August 16, moved, over Cumberland Mountains and Waldron's Ridge, to Poe's Tavern, and, September 9, forded Tennessee, and moved in advance of Chittenden's Corps, toward Ringgold. 11th, moved to Tunnel Hill, skirmishing with Forrest. 12th, moved to Gordon's Mills. 13th, lay in line of battle, skirmishing with the enemy, and, 14th, moved to Stephenson's Gap. On 17th, moved to Alexander's Bridge, and on 18th, the battle of Chickamauga began. The Ninety-eighth did good service in this action, and lost five killed and 36 wounded—Colonel Funkhouser being severely wounded.

During the remainder of the month, the Regiment marched to Stevenson, guarding prisoners, and returned. On 1st of October, the Brigade, Colonel A. O. Miller commanding, with First and Second Brigades of Cavalry, under General Crook, started in pursuit of Wheeler. On 2d crossed Walden's bridge, and moved through Sequatchie to summit of Cumberland Mountains. 3d, the Ninety-eighth Illinois and Seventeenth Indiana attacked a Brigade of the enemy—their rear guard—and defeated it, killing or wounding 15 or 20 of the enemy. On the 4th, drove the enemy from McMinnville. 7th, came up with the enemy near Shelbyville and charged him, capturing 50 prisoners, and losing only two wounded.

Was engaged in battle of Farmington.

On the 8th, was engaged in pursuit of Wheeler and followed him until he crossed Tennessee, 19th.

Went into camp at Maysville. On 21st November, moved to Chattanooga, where the Brigade was numbered the Third, and assigned to Second Cavalry Division, Brigadier General Crook commanding. The Ninety-eighth, numbering only 200 effective men, mounted.

The Division crossed the Chickamauga on pontoons and marched up the Tennessee to Bly's Ferry, and thence to Tine's Station, cutting the railroad and telegraph wires in sight of Bragg's camp fires. On November 24, captured wagon train of 60 wagons, and moved into Cleveland. On 28th, had a slight engagement with the enemy, losing two wounded.

On 28th, Major Marquiss and Lieutenant Rickard, in charge of dismounted men, returned to Huntsville.

29th, the Ninety-eighth, numbering 150 men, moved to Benton.

December 1, took advance of Sherman's Army, driving the enemy to Loudon, and, on 2d, forded Little Tennessee and moved to Knoxville. Moved to Maysville on 5th, and Murphy on the 8th. Went into camp at Calhoun, on the Hiawassee River on 15th—the Regiment being reduced to 111 men and officers. On 28th December, had a skirmish with Wheeler's Cavalry, driving them some distance and capturing the Inspector General of Kelly's rebel Division.

February 4, 1864, Colonel Funkhouser joined the Regiment with the balance of the command.

In January, 1864, the Third Brigade had been assigned to Second Cavalry Division. On 23d and 24th February, the command was engaged at Buzzard's Roost, losing 12 wounded. On March 1, moved to Cleveland. 16th, moved to Ringgold and went on picket duty, extending the line toward Nickajack. Lost two men wounded. On 14th April, ordered to Columbia, and marched, via Bridgeport, Battle Creek, Decherd and Shelbyville, arriving April 24. On 30th April, the Ninety-eighth, 400 strong, moved to the front, arriving at LaFayette, Ga., May 9. On 11th, marched to Villanon, and, on 14th, moved toward Rome. 16th, to Lay's Ferry, and, on 19th, marched through Kingston. On 23d, crossed Etowah and moved toward Van Wert, and, on 24th, through Van Wert, and within two miles of Dallas met the enemy and drove him to Dallas. Skirmished with the enemy on 25th and moved toward Powder Springs.

On 28th May, took position on McPherson's right, dismounted, and repulsed a charge of the enemy; and, on 29th, moved to Burnt Hickory. June 9, made a reconnoissance beyond Big Shanty. Dismounted, and drove the enemy 5 miles. On 19th and 20th June moved out to Noonday Creek, and skirmished with the enemy.

On July 3, marched through Marietta, and, on 4th, skirmished heavily. On 5th moved toward Roswell Factory, and, on 9th, drove the enemy's pickets from the Chattahoochie and took possession of Roswell Factory.

Colonel Funkhouser resigned, to take effect July 5. Crossed Chattahoochie to Cross Keys, on 17th, and struck Atlanta and Augusta Railroad 16 miles east of Atlanta, destroying several miles of track, and, on 19th, returned to McAfee's Bridge. Moved to Decatur on the 21st, and to Oxford and Covington, captured a railroad train and 16 prisoners, burning railroad bridge, and returned to Decatur, 24th.

On 25th July, moved in support of Stoneman, in the movement on Atlanta and Mobile Railroad. The Division (Garrard's) was, at one time, entirely surrounded by the enemy, but cut its way out, and returned to rear of Atlanta.

On the 1st of August, 1864, the Division was ordered to occupy the works vacated by the Twenty-third Corps. On 15th moved out of the works, and, on 20th, moved with Kilpatrick on the reconnoissance to Decatur.

Participated in Sherman's flank movements to Rough-and-Ready, and went on picket at Jonesboro, September 4 to 8. Moved to Decatur 8th September, to Blake's Mills 9th, and on 19th went on scout towards Lawrenceville. On 21st, moved to support of Kilpatrick, via Atlanta, Dry Pond and Sandtown. Croosed the Chattahootchie on the 24th, and reconoitered toward Campbelltown. Moved to Lost Mountain and Ackworth.

Was engaged in watching movements of Hood's Army, then marching north. Camped, October 4, near Kenesaw. On 12th moved to Rome. On 13th, moved out and attacked the enemy, defeating him. On 15th, moved to Adairsville. On 16th, to Snake Creek Gap. On 19th, to Chattoogaville. On 20th, to Galesville. On 21st attacked and routed Wheeler, near Little River, at Budd's farm.

November 1, turned over our horses and equipments to Kilpatrick.

On 2d November, moved to Calhoun. On 4th, moved toward Chattanooga, arriving 6th, and, on 13th, arrived at Nashville. Moved thence to Louisville. Lay in camp until December 26, waiting for horses and equipments, and then ordered to Bardstown, to intercept enemy under General Lyon. December 31, moved to Elizabethtown.

On 12th January, 1865, the command passed through Nashville, Tenn., and marched, via Columbia and Mount Pleasant, to Gravelly Springs, Ala., remaining in camp at that place until March 13. Moved to Waterloo and Chickasaw Landing. On 22d March, commenced the spring campaign, with the First, Second and Fourth Cavalry Divisions, 12,000 strong. Brevet Major General Wilson commanding. On 31st, arrived at Montrevale—Roddy's rebel command being driven out by General Upton. On April 1, the enemy made a stand at Ebenezer Church, but were routed by four companies of the Seventeenth Indiana. On April 2, participated in capture of Selma. The Fourth Cavalry Division having failed in their assault, 1,600 men of Second Division, General Long commanding, made the attack and carried the works. The loss of the Ninety-eighth, in this action, was 9 killed and two mortally wounded, 6 officers wounded and 21 men wounded. Number of the Regiment engaged, 172.

On 9th, crossed Alabama River, and, April 13, marched through Montgomery. On 16th, marched through Columbus, and on 20th, entered Macon, without opposition. The Ninety-eighth was detailed for provost guard, and Lieutenant Colonel Kitchell as Provost Marshal of the city. May 23d, started for Chattanooga, arriving June 1; and, thence, to Nashville, arriving 15th, and camping near Edgefield. Was here joined by Major Marquiss and a detachment of Ninety-eighth.

Mustered out June 27, 1865, by Captain L. M. Hosea, A. C. M. The recruits were transferred to Sixty-first Illinois Volunteers. Arrived at Springfield, Ill., 30th June, and received final payment and discharge, July 7, 1865.

The Ninety-eighth while attached to the First Brigade, Second Division of Cavalry, as Mounted Infantry, assisted in the capture at Macon, Ga., of four brass cannon which had been buried near the small-pox hospital at that place, as deceased soldiers, marking them with head and foot boards. One of these pieces was given to the Ninety-eighth and subsequently it was presented to Illinois, when it was placed on exhibition in Memorial Hall.

HISTORY OF NINETY-NINTH INFANTRY.

The Ninety-ninth Infantry was organized in Pike county in August, 1862, by Colonel George W. K. Bailey of Pittsfield, and was mustered in at Florence, Pike county, August 23 by Captain J. H. Rathbone; on same day moved to St. Louis, Mo., and went into Benton Barracks on the 24th, where it received its equipments, being the first Regiment out of the State under the call of 1862.

September 8, was sent to Rolla, Mo., thence, September 17, to Salem, Dent county, thence, November 20, to Houston, Texas county. Was assigned to the Brigade of Brigadier General Fitz Henry Warren. Was engaged in a skirmish at Bear Creek, losing 1 killed, 4 wounded and 1 taken prisoner, and in the battle of Hartsville lost 35 killed and wounded.

January 27, 1863, moved to West Plains, Howell county, reporting to Brigadier General Davidson.

March 3, moved to Pilot Knob, thence to St. Genevieve.

March 15, embarked for Milliken's Bend, La.; was assigned to General Benton's Brigade, General E. H. Carr's Division, General McClernand's Thirteenth Army Corps.

Left Milliken's Bend April 11, arrived at New Carthage 12th. Marched down Roundway Bayou in Louisiana, passed Vicksburg and Grand Gulf. Crossed the river April 30 and after marching all night met the enemy at Magnolia Hills, near Port Gibson, Miss.; lost 37 killed and wounded.

Marched with General Grant's army toward Jackson, Miss.; was held in reserve at the battle of Champion Hills (the hardest one-day battle fought in the west.) Started into the engagement at nightfall, pursued the retreating rebels to Edwards Station and engaged them the next morning; charged upon their works at Black River and drove them across the river, capturing many prisoners. Our loss was light.

On 19th of May was at the defences of Vicksburg. On the 22d the Regiment took a prominent part in the assault, losing, out of 300 men, 103 killed and wounded. The Colonel and Major were wounded early in the day, leaving Captain A. C. Mathews in command. Its line, during the day, was close to the enemy's works, and its colors planted on their breastworks. This position was held by the Ninety-ninth until 4 o'clock p. m., when it was relieved by another regiment, and moved back 150 yards to where its knapsacks had been left. While calling roll the line which had relieved the Regiment was driven back in great confusion. The Ninety-ninth advanced, and opening a heavy fire, drove the enemy back into his works and held him there, probably saving the whole Division from stampede.

Was engaged during the siege in General Benton's Brigade—Eighth and Eighteenth Indiana, and Thirty-third and Ninety-ninth Illinois. The Ninety-ninth lost during the entire campaign and siege, 253 killed, wounded and missing.

On July 5 the Ninth, Thirteenth and Fifteenth Army Corps, Major General Sherman commanding, moved after Johnson's army to Jackson. Returned to Vicksburg July 24. On 21st of August moved to New Orleans, and on 26th went into camp at Brashear City.

October 3, 1863, the Campaign of the Tesche was commenced. The Regiment was in several skirmishes, and a detachment of the Regiment, Captain A. C. Mathews commanding, was engaged in the battle of Grand Coteau. On 9th November, returned to Brashear City, and moved to New Orleans.

In the assault at Vicksburg May 22, the color bearer, the gallant young hero William Sitton, was wounded, when the invincible Tom Higgins grasped the stars and stripes, and carried them into the breastworks, where he was captured, and lost the stand of colors. In 1873 the colors were sent from Richmond, Va., to Philadelphia, Pa., thence to Springfield Ill., where they now are. Stains of blood can yet be seen on them, the patriot blood of the lamented Sitton.

November 16, embarked for Texas. On 25th, landed at Mustang Island, and, marching up to Matagorda Island, commenced the attack on Fort Esperanza, which was soon surrendered. The Ninety-ninth remained in Texas during the spring of 1864.

On 16th of June, 1864, it evacuated the Island, and reported to General Reynolds, at Algiers, La. The Regiment performed garrison duty on the Mississippi during the entire summer, in First Brigade, Brigadier General Slack; First Division, General Dennis; Nineteenth Corps, General Reynolds. The Ninety-ninth was brigaded with Twenty-first Iowa, Twenty-ninth Wisconsin and Forty-seventh Indiana.

In November, 1864, moved to Memphis. Here the Regiment was consolidated into a Battalion of five companies, and Lieutenant Colonel A. C. Mathews assigned to command, Colonel Bailey, and the other supernumerary officers, being mustered out.

Moved to Germantown, and went on duty guarding railroad. On December 25, three men of the Battalion were captured and murdered by guerrillas. Moved to Memphis, December 28. On January 1, 1865, embarked for New Orleans, and arrived on the 9th. On 1st February, embarked for Dauphine Island, Ala. Was assigned to First Brigade, First Division, Thirteenth Corps, with Twenty-first Iowa, Forty-seventh Indiana and Twenty-ninth Wisconsin—General Slack commanding Brigade, Brigadier General Veatch commanding Division.

On March 17th moved to Fort Morgan, and, on 26th, arrived at Fish River. Took part in the siege of Spanish Fort, until the 30th, when the Division was sent to General Steele's Army, and, April 1, went into position at Fort Blakely. The Ninety-ninth assisted in its investment and capture, and, on the 12th, entered Mobile.

In June, 1865, the Division was ordered to Red River, to receive the surrender of Kirby Smith, and it proceeded to Shreveport, La. From this place Colonel Mathews was detailed to proceed, with a body-guard of the Sixth Missouri Cavalry, to the Indian Territory, and receive the surrender of Brigadier Generals Cooper and Standwaite, and to form temporary treaties of peace with the Indian tribes. The Colonel formed treaties with ten tribes—including the Choctaws, Cherokees, Chickasaws and Osages—and returned (having traveled a thousand miles) on the 3d of July.

On 19th July, ordered to Baton Rouge. On 31st of July, mustered out by Captain E. S. Hawk, A. C. M.

Arrived at Springfield, Ill., August 6, 1865, and received final payment and discharge August 9, 1865, and by midnight of same day the surviving veterans were in their own county.

The Ninety-ninth had three years of active service and were in the states of Missouri, Arkansas, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas and Alabama.

The Ninety ninth was often honored by having important staff positions given to its line officers. Captain, afterward Colonel Mathews, was on staff duty with different Generals, also Lieutenants Sever, Bowsman and Kinne. Captain Massie was A. A. Q. M. and A. A. C. S. and was A. A. A. General in the battles at Spanish Fort and Blakely. No particular distinction is claimed for the officers named, but this mention is due them and the Regiment, as the position came to them unsought, and the survivors of the old Regiment take just pride in remembering the gallant and famous commanders with whom they served, namely, Grant, Sherman, Granger, Steele, Reynolds, Canby, Carr, McGinnis, Veatch Slack, Lawler, Washburn and Schenck.

Shortly after their discharge the survivors, their wives and sweethearts, were given a grand dinner by the citizens of Pittsfield, where 3 years before over 900 men had marched out to do and die for their country. At the banquet less than 350 partook of the feast.

The Ninety-ninth was in the following battles and skirmishes: Beaver Creek, Mo., Hartsville, Mo., Magnolia Hills, Miss , Raymond, Miss., Champion Hills, Miss., Black River, Miss., Vicksburg, Miss., Jackson, Miss., Fort Esperanza, Tex., Grand Coteau, La., Fish River, Ala., Spanish Fort, Ala., and Blakely, Ala.

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDREDTH INFANTRY.

The 100th Regiment of Illinois Volvnteer Infantry, also known as the Will County Regiment, was recruited in July and August, 1862, and rendezvoused at Camp Irwin, Joliet, in the latter month. Frederick A. Bartleson, major of the 20th Illinois Infantry, who had lost an arm at Shiloh, was commissioned Colonel of the 100th, and the Regiment was mustered into the military service of the United States on the 30th of August, 1862. Of the total enrollment of 921 officers and enlisted men, all but 73 were enlisted in and credited to Will county.

September 2, 1862, the Regiment was ordered to the front and moved via the Chicago & Alton railroad to Springfield, Ill., and thence to Louisville, Ky. The men were unarmed and undisciplined, and as ignorant of military tactics as a Digger Indian is of the dead languages, but they soon learned the duties of a soldier in the school of experience and hard service. The Regiment never became a pastmaster in the art of military evolutions, as laid down by Hardee and Casey, but for nearly three years it was on the firing line in every battle and skirmish in which the Army of the Cumberland was engaged.

Arriving at Louisville, the 100th was assigned to the 1st Brigade, 2d Division of what was then known as the Army of Kentucky, composed exclusively of new troops. This assignment was only temporary and on the 1st of October, after the arrival of General Don Carlos Buell and his army, the Regiment was transferred to the 15th Brigade, 6th Division, Army of the Ohio. General Milo S. Haskell commanded the brigade and General Thomas J. Wood the division.

The first experience of the Regiment under fire was near Bardstown, Ky., where it was ordered by General Haskell to make a charge. Moving promptly forward the Regiment drove the enemy through the town and two miles beyond. It was not engaged at Perryville, but took part in the subsequent pursuit of General Bragg, as far as Wild Cat, Ky., where the pursuit was discontinued, and from thence marched by way of Columbia and Scottsville, Ky., and Gallatin, Tenn., to Nashville, where it arrived November 26, 1862.

Meanwhile General Buell had been superceded by General William S. Rosecrans and the army was now known as the Army of the Cumberland, and so remained until the troops of which it was composed were mustered out of service after the war had ended. In the movement upon Murfreesboro, the 100th was engaged in skirmishes at Lavergne and Stuart's Creek, and participated in the battle of Stone River on December 31, 1862, and January 1, 2 and 3, 1863. On the first day of this battle the right wing of the army, commanded by Major General A. McD. McCook, was broken and driven back upon the center. The 100th, with other troops, was ordered into action, gallantly charged the enemy, drove them back and assisted in holding the positions occupied by the center and left wings until General Rosecrans could establish a new line for his shattered right.

After the battle of Stone River, the army, which had heretofore formed but one army corps, was reorganized, the right and left wings of three divisions each, forming the 20th and 21st army corps respectively, while the center, of four divisions, retained the old corps number, the 14th. The respective commanders of these corps were Major Generals George H. Thomas, Alexander McDowell McCook and Thomas L. Crittenden. There was also a reserve corps of three divisions commanded by Major General Gordon Granger. The 100th was one of the four regiments of the 1st Brigade, 1st Division, 21st Army Corps, the other regiments being the 58th Indiana, 26th Ohio and 13th Michigan. The brigade was commanded by Colonel George P. Buell and the division by General Thomas J. Wood.

In the advance from Murfreesboro to Tullahoma and Chattanooga, the 100th marched to Manchester, Tenn., crossed the Cumberland mountains into the Sequatchie valley, from whence it moved to Shellmound, where it crossed the Tennesee river and entered Chattanooga September 9, 1863, almost on the heels of the retreating Confederate rear guard.

The next day the Regiment moved out to Chickamauga creek, taking position at Lee & Gordon's mill. It took part in the movements preliminary to the battle of Chickamauga, in which it was hotly engaged on Saturday, September 19. Sunday forenoon, in obedience to orders from Colonel Bartleson, the Regiment charged forward across the Brotherton field, passed the Brotherton house and up to and across Lafayette road, unmasking the enemy's batteries and developing his line of battle. Being unsupported, the Regiment was repulsed with a severe loss in killed, wounded and prisoners. Colonel Bartleson being among the latter. For many years it was contended that no Union troops crossed the Lafayette road on the second day of the battle, but the writer has in his possession a letter, dated November 21, 1891, from Captain S. C. Kellogg, of the 5th United States cavalry, at that time secretary of the Chickamauga and Chattanooga National Military Park Commission, in which he acknowledges that the 100th did make a charge as is herein stated, and cross the Lafayette road on Sunday, September 20, 1863. The total loss of the Regiment in this great battle was 50½ per cent of the 339 officers and men engaged.

Soon after the battle of Chickamauga the command of the Army of the Cumberland devolved upon General Thomas, who relieved General Rosecrans. The army had been again reorganized, the 20th and 21st army corps being discontinued and the troops were all merged into the 4th and 14th army corps. The 100th now belonged to the 2nd brigade, commanded by Brigadier General George D. Wagner, 2nd division, 4th army corps. Major General Phillip H. Sheridan commanded the division and Major General Gordon Granger the corps. At the battle of Missionary Ridge, November 25, 1863, the Regiment was on the left of the division in the front line and charged almost directly in front of Bragg's headquarters, carried the enemy's works at the foot of the ridge and then pushed for a crest capturing many prisoners and a battery and pursuing the routed Confederates as far as the Chickamauga river, where the pursuit ended, owing to the lateness of the hour, the darkness of the night and the further fact that the enemy had succeeded in getting safely across the stream.

The next day the 100th started on the long march for Knoxville to the relief of General Burnside. Upon the approach of the relieving column General Longstreet raised the siege and retreated toward Virginia. The 100th was a part of the force that made the Dandridge campaign, a short but severe one and barren of results. The Regiment wintered in East Tennessee, being stationed at Athens for about six weeks, from which place it marched in the spring to Cleveland, Tenn., to prepare for the opening of the Atlanta campaign.

This campaign opened May 4, 1864, and for the next four months there was almost constant fighting. The skirmishing was incessant and the battles frequent. Of the latter may be mentioned Rocky Face Ridge, Resaca, Adairsville, Dallas, Kenesaw Mountain, Peachtree Creek, Atlanta and Jonesboro, as among those in which the 100th participated.

Returning northward by rail, while General Hood with his army, after recrossing the Chattahoochee river, marched in the same direction, the Regiment for some time patroled the railroad in either direction as far as Stevenson, Ala., and Dalton, Ga. When Sherman cut loose from his communications and started on the "march for the sea," the 4th corps was left behind, which fortunate circumstance gave the Regiment the opportunity to take part in the battles of Spring Hill, Franklin and Nashville, the most complete and decisive victory for the Union arms of the civil war, and to which the 100th contributed its share by the active part it took in the capture of Montgomery Hill and the lines of breastworks so stubbornly defended by the gallant soldiers of the army it had confronted for nearly three years.

The losses of the 100th during its service may be summarized as follows:

Officers killed, or died of wounds	7
Enlisted men killed, or died of wounds	78
Officers wounded	19
Enlisted men wounded	182
Enlisted men died of disease	107
Enlisted men died in rebel prisons	12
Total	405

In this computation no man is counted twice. Some of the dead were wounded in action that occurred previous to the one in which they were killed, while many were wounded twice and some three times.

The statement of the loss sustained by the Regiment is compiled from personal knowledge and data in possession of the writer, and is believed to be absolutely correct, and is accepted as being so by survivors of the Regiment to whom it has been submitted. The reports in this respect are incomplete.

Twenty-four officers of the 302 enlisted men were mustered out of service June 12, 1865, at Nashville, Tenn., but all these were not present with the Regiment. Its actual service covered a period of about thirty-three months, every day of it at the front.

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND FIRST INFANTRY.

The One Hundred and First Infantry Regiment Illinois Volunteers was organized at Camp Duncan, Jacksonville, Ill., during the latter part of the month of August, 1862, and on the 2d of September, 1862, was formally mustered into the United States service, by Captain Charles Ewing, Thirteenth Infantry.

For about a month after muster-in the Regiment remained at Camp Duncan, engaged in drilling and equipping for the field. At last, on the 6th of October, marching orders came, and, embarking on the cars, the Regiment, on the evening of the 7th, reached Cairo at sunset.

Here the Regiment remained for over a month, doing garrison duty. The interim was devoted to drill, in which the Regiment became so proficient as to win a very fair name. In consequence of the rainy weather, there was a great deal of sickness while at Cairo, and a good many men were discharged or died from disease. November 26 the Regiment left Cairo, and proceeded down the river to Columbus, Ky., and thence, by rail, to Davis' Mills, Miss., where it was assigned to Loomis' Brigade of Ross' Division, Army of the Tennessee.

November 28 it started on its first march, and, on the 30th, reached Lumpkin's Mills, six miles south of Holly Springs, where the Regiment first heard the "clash of contending arms," from the Tallahatchie River, six miles beyond. The Regiment remained at Lumpkin's Mills three days, when it received orders to return to Holly Springs, Miss., for provost and garrison duty.

December 13, Company A, Captain John B. Lesage, was sent to Cairo, with rebel prisoners. December 20, Holly Springs was captured, and Companies B, C, E, F, I and the sick men of Company A, who had been left behind, were taken prisoners and paroled. Soon after they were sent to Memphis, and, thence, to Benton Barracks, Mo., where they re mained until exchanged, in June, 1863.

At the Holly Springs disaster the men of this Regiment, on duty, did all they could have done, under the circumstances. Another regiment was doing the picket duty while the One Hundred and First was in the town, doing provost duty, and divided about the town, in squads too small to make successful resistance to the overpowering numbers that surrounded them. Wherever the blame of this disaster shall rest it securely should not attach itself to the One Hundred and First Illinois. When the town was captured Companies D, G, H and K, which were stationed along the railroad, fell back to Cold Water, where they fell in with the Ninetieth Illinois (Irish Legion,) and assisted greatly in repelling Van Dorn's attack on that place.

Afterwards, these four companies were formed into a Battalion, and temporarily assigned to the Fourteenth Illinois Volunteers, and did a great deal of scouting service over Tennessee, finally bringing up at Memphis, Tenn., in February, 1863. Here they were joined by Company A, Captain Lesage, who took command of the Battalion. Upon leaving Holly Springs, Company A proceeded to Cairo, and thence to Vicksburg, but was sent back up the river with prisoners. About the first of February the prisoners were turned over at Alton, Ill., but not until the Company had been fearfully decreased by the sickness incurred while on that duty. Often Captain Lesage could not muster half a dozen men for duty, and this, too, when he had over a thousand prisoners under his charge.

Early in March the Battalion was ordered down to Vicksburg, where it was broken up, and the companies assigned to various independent duties. Company K was assigned to provost duty at General Grant's Headquarters; Company A was assigned to the "General Bragg;" Company G to the ram "Switzerland;" Company D to the "Rattler" and the "Crocket;" and Company H to the "Lafayette."

From this, until the final reunion of the Regiment, each company had its separate history of scouts, skirmishes and expeditions, up and down the Mississippi and its tributary streams. Company G had the honor of running the blockade at Vicksburg, for which service, after its fall, General Grant furloughed the entire company.

On the 7th of June the other part of the Regiment was exchanged, and sent down to New Madrid, Mo. July 11 they were sent to Columbus, Ky., where they were started out on a series of scouts and expeditions, which only terminated, about the 25th of August, by their bringing up at Union City, Tenn. Here they remained about a month, during which time Companies A, D, G, H and K rejoined them, and completed the reunion of the Regiment, which remained a unit thenceforth.

September 24, 1863, the Regiment received orders transferring it to the Department of the Cumberland, and it started, at once, for Louisville, Ky., via Cairo and Sandoval, Ill., and Mitchell and New Albany, Ind., arriving in Louisville September 27. September 30 it left Louisville via Nashville, and arrived at Bridgeport, Ala., October 2, 1863, and remained there until the 27th. This period of service is always referred to as a hard time, owing to the severe rains and destitution of tents. In fact most of the Regiment were tentless until the 1st of January, following.

October 27 the Regiment was temporarily assigned to the First Brigade, Third Division, Eleventh Army Corps, and started on the march to the front, arriving next day at Lookout Valley, where, on the night of its arrival, it participated in the night battle of Wauhatchie, where, by singular good fortune, not a man was hurt. For nearly a month, following, the Regiment lay encamped in the valley, exposed to the daily shelling from Lookout Mountain, which, during that time, killed one man and wounded another.

November 22 the Regiment received marching orders, and proceeded to Chattanooga, where it participated in the battle of Chattanooga, losing one man killed. Immediately after the battle it was ordered to the relief of Knoxville, and participated in that severe march; and, finally, returned to Lookout Valley, December 17. Many of the men were barefooted, and, in that condition, had marched many a weary mile, over the frozen ground and sharp rocks, even as their forefathers had done in revolutionary times, leaving their blood to mark their steps.

Recruiting its strength in the valley for a few days, the Regiment was then set to work building corduroy roads; after which, on the 1st of January, 1864, they were sent to Kelley's Ferry to relieve the Sixteenth Illinois, then about to return home on veteran furlough. Here the regiment remained until the last of January, when, upon the completion of the railroad to Chattanooga, they were ordered to Bridgeport, where they went into camp, and quietly remained there until the 2d of May, when they started for the front. The Eleventh and Twelfth Corps had been consolidated into the Twentieth Army Corps, and the old Brigade, to which the One Hundred and First had been attached in the Eleventh Corps, had been transferred to the First Division in the new corps, and became the Third Brigade of that division. This brigade was commanded by Colonel (afterwards Brigadier General) Robinson, of the Eighty-second Ohio. Leaving Bridgeport on May 2, on the 6th reached Taylor's Ridge, which was crossed next day, and encamped at Anderson Postoffice. Remained there until midnight of May 10, when it marched for Snake Creek Gap, which was reached next day and held for two days. On the 13th, having marched through the Gap, the troops were ready for action, near Resaca, but were held in reserve all day. On the 14th were again held in reserve until 3 P. M., when they started on the double-quick for the left, which was reached just in time for the Brigade to render important service in the action then progressing.

During this engagement, it is said, the One Hundred and First was ordered to take a hill in front of them, which they did in so gallant a style as to win the admiration of General Hooker, who happened to be standing near, and who cheered the troops with the encouraging shout of, "Go in, my Illinois boys." The next afternoon it was ordered forward, and, at 4 o'clock, while in column, was charged by a rebel force.

Both officers and men of the Regiment conducted themselves gallantly, and rendered valuable services, losing one man killed, six mortally wounded and forty wounded. Pressing the rebels, it again came upon them at Cassville, Ga., on the 19th, but did not get into a fight, as the rebels left. Again, followed on the 23d, and, on the 25th got into a hot and heavy fight at New Hope Church. Among the wounded at this place were Adjutant Padgett, Lieutenant Hardin and Lieutenant (afterward Captain) Belt, who subsequently died of wounds.

After this, the Regiment bore an honorable share in the various manœuvres around Kenesaw and Pine Mountains, losing one killed and five or six wounded. During the battle of Kulp's farm, June 22, it supported Battery I, First New York, which did signal execution during the fight. June 27, lost Lieutenant Dimm, who was killed on the skirmish line. After the rebels evacuated Kenesaw, was engaged in the pursuit, and, on the 6th of July, took position on Chattahoochie Heights, where the Regiment remained eleven days.

July 17, crossed the river, and, on the 20th, just after crossing Peach Tree Creek, the rebels assailed the Corps with terrible force. Forming line under fire the enemy was held at bay, and their charges repelled until 8 P. M., when he abandoned the attack and returned to his fortifications. In this engagement five were filled and 35 wounded. Among the killed was Captain Thomas B. Woof. The morning report, next morning, showed only 120 effective men for duty, having left Bridgeport with 365 men.

July 22, took position in front of Atlanta—the Regiment supporting Battery I, First New York, in which position it remained until the 25th of August, when it was ordered back to Chattahoochie Bridge, which the Corps was to guard while the rest of the army swung into the rear of Atlanta.

September 2 the Regiment was sent out on a reconnoissance (together with the Thirteenth New Jersey and One Hundred and Seventh New York), and claims the honor of having been the first Regiment that entered Atlanta, Ga., after its fall, which occurred on the second anniversary of its muster into service. It remained in Atlanta until the destruction of the place—most of the time having charge of the fire department.

November 15, started on the "great march," and participated in all its glories, its trials and its triumphs; and, whether as advance guard, driving rebel cavalry before it, or as rear guard, pulling wagons out of the mud or corduroying roads, over unfathomable mud holes, the One Hundred and First Illinois always did its duty so well as to win high commendations from its Brigade and Division commanders. The story of that march is about the same for all regiments, and need hardly be repeated. The Regiment reached Savannah and entered the place December 22, 1864.

January 17, 1865, crossed over into South Carolina, and went through the great campaign of the Carolinas, participating in the battles of Averysboro and Bentonville, losing only one man wounded.

March 24, entered Goldsboro, and, on the 13th of April, entered Raleigh, where the Regiment remained until the final surrender of the rebel army, after which, on the 30th, it started overland for Richmond, Va., which was reached May 8. Here it remained until the 11th, when it marched through Richmond and took up the line of march for Alexandria, where it arrived on the 19th.

May 24, participated in the "grand review," and then went into camp at Bladensburg, where, on the 7th of June, it was mustered out, and started for Springfield, where, on the 21st of June, 1865, it was paid off and disbanded.

HISTORY OF HUNDRED AND SECOND INFANTRY.

The One Hundred and Second Infantry Illinois Volunteers was organized at Knoxville, Ill., in August, 1862, by Colonel William McMurtry, and mustered in September 1st and 2d.

On 22d September the Regiment moved to Peoria, Ill., and October 1 moved to Louisville, Kentucky, and was assigned to Ward's Brigade, Dumont's Division, and immediately moved southward, marching via Shelbyville, Frankfort, Bowling Green and Scottsville, to Gallatin, Tenn., arriving November 26.

The Regiment went into winter quarters at Gallatin.

About the 1st of May, 1863, the commander of the post at Gallatin received information that a band of guerrillas was moving in the direction of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad with the evident purpose of capturing a train with its rich store of mail and express matter. The point of attack selected was supposed to be near Franklin, not far from the state line. Colonel Smith, the commander of the Regiment, was called upon for a detail of 150 men with 80 rounds of ammunition, and the detachment immediately started out for Franklin, taking a north bound train. Upon arriving at the town a large number of citizens were observed about the depot whose nervous and excited manner indicated that trouble was expected. Colonel Smith divided his men, leaving 75 at Franklin, and with the remainder he started out for Bowling Green, expecting to meet a returning train at that point. They had scarcely proceeded more than three miles when the engineer discovered the rails displaced at the end of an embankment and blew the whistle for down brakes, and the train was stopped just in time to avoid a fearful calamity. As soon as the train came to a stop a volley of musketry was fired upon the cars, shattering the windows, killing two men and wounding five more. The shots came from a piece of woods at the roadside where the enemy was well protected, but no sooner had the firing commenced than a volley was returned by our men, followed up by a charge upon the bushwhackers who took to their heels and made off as quickly as possible, leaving four dead and several wounded, of whom two afterward died of their wounds. The guerrillas were dispersed and the trains thereafter ran in comparative safety.

On June 1, 1863, the Brigade was ordered to Lavergne, at which point four regiments were stationed for the purpose of guarding the Nashville and Chattanooga R. R. The One Hundred and Second Regiment was sent on to Stewart's Creek, a small post six miles south. Colonel Smith was placed in command of the post, which consisted of his own Regiment and a battalion of the Eighteenth Ohio Cavalry, which was soon after relieved by a battalion of the First Ohio Cavalry, and a section of the First Michigan Artillery. In August following orders were received from General Granger, who commanded the district, to mount five companies of the One Hundred and Second Regiment by taking horses suitable for the purpose from the disloyal citizens in that vicinity, which was soon accomplished, and being furnished with Spencer's Repeating Rifles, this Regiment became notorious even among the rebels, as the most effective fighting regiment in that branch of the army.

On the 9th of November, 1863, moved to Lebanon, and returned on the 11th. Surgeon Stanway was severely wounded by guerrillas.

On February 25, 1864, broke winter quarters at Lavergne, and marched, via Tullahoma, Decherd, Stevenson, Ala., and camped in Wauhatchie Valley, Tenn.

The One Hundred and Second was assigned to First Brigade, Third Division, Twentieth Army Corps, Brigadier General W. T. Ward commanding Brigade.

While at Wauhatchie five companies of the Regiment, which had been mounted, gave up their horses, but retained their Spencer rifles during the Atlanta campaign.

On May 2 commenced the campaign. May 14, was engaged at Resaca, losing 3 killed and 19 wounded. On the 15th the Brigade captured a battery from the enemy at Camp creek —the One Hundred and Second losing 18 killed, 6 mortally wounded, and 70 wounded. On 25th May encountered the enemy at Burnt Hickory, and was engaged four days, losing 4 killed and 14 wounded.

On June 1 was engaged at Big Shanty. June 15th and 16th was engaged, losing 13 wounded, including Colonel Smith and Captain McManus. Engaged at Perch Tree Creek, July 20, losing 2 killed and 11 wounded. On September 16 moved to Atlanta.

On November 15, 1864, commenced the Savannah march. On 22d arrived at Milledgeville; crossed the Ogeechee on the 29th, and December 11 established line of battle at Savannah, and on 21st entered that city.

On January 5, 1865, moved to Hardeeville, and, on 30th, to Robertville, near Sisters' Ferry.

On February 2 marched westward to Blackville and Willistown, and thence, northward, to Columbia, arriving February 19.

March 11 reached Fayetteville. March 16 was engaged at Averysboro, losing 2 killed and 19 wounded; among the latter were Captains Merritt and Matteson and Lieutenant Trego. On 23d of March, camped at Goldsboro. On April 10, marched toward Raleigh, where the army remained until Johnson's surrender.

On 30th marched for Washington, arriving May 19.

On May 24 passed review with our army.

June 6, 1865, mustered out of service, and started home, arriving at Chicago, Ill., on the 9th. June 14 received final payment and discharge.

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND THIRD INFANTRY.

About the 6th of August, 1862, Hon. A. C. Babcock, Captain G. W. Wright, late of the Seventeenth Illinois, Mr. Peterson and other influential men of the county, concluded that it was possible to form an entire regiment from Fulton county.

On the 6th of September nine companies arrived at Peoria, went into camp, and organized as the One Hundred and Third Regiment, electing A. C. Babcock Colonel; Parley Stearns Lieutenant Colonel; G. W. Wright Major; W. A. Dickerman Quartermaster and S. S. Tipton Adjutant.

It had been understood with Governor Yates that in case Fulton county could not, by the 1st of October, furnish a sufficient number of men to form a regiment, he would send a company from some other county.

About the 27th of September, Colonel Babcock visited Governor Yates to get the tenth company. On referring to the last morning report, it was found there were men enough to muster ten companies.

Colonel Babcock returned, and on the 1st of October ordered that the extra men be formed into a company. On the 2d of October this was done, when the Regiment was mustered into the service of the United States by Lieutenant Knox, U. S. A.

The 18th of October Colonel Babcock and Lieutenant Colonel Stearns resigned their commissions to the Governor, never having mustered into the United States service. The vacancies were filled as follows: Qurtermaster Dickerman was made Colonel. Major Wright was made Lieutenant Colonel. Captain Willison, of Company A, Major. Lieutenant Bishop, Captain of Company A. Lieutenant Worley, First Lieutenat of Company A. H. Willison, Second Lieutenant of Company A, Second Lieutenant Mellor, of Company F, was made Quartermaster. J. H. Bailey was made Second Lieutenant of Company F.

The officers of the One Hundred and Third had many of them seen service in other regiments, the Seventeenth Infantry furnishing six; the Eighth Infantry two; the Seventh Cavalry one, and the Fifty-fifth Infantry one. For this reason the Regiment early took a front rank in regard to drill.

The 24th of October, the Regiment being in a fair condition for service, received orders to be ready to move at a moment's warning. On the 30th orders were received to move by the Illinois Central Railroad to Cairo. The next day we bade adieu to our many friends in Peoria.

At Cairo we took boat for Columbus, Ky., where we were again placed on cars and at night arrived at Bolivar, Tenn., having made the trip from Peoria in 52 hours.

We were now at the front, within 18 miles of a large and well appointed force of the enemy. We were assigned to the First Brigade, commanded by Colonel Pugh, of the Forty-first Illinois, Fourth Division, Brigadier General Veach, Thirteenth Army Corps, General J. B. McPherson commanding.

November 3 we moved en route for LaGrange, where we arrived with the advance of the army, went into quarters near, and finally in town. Drill and frequent scouts filled up the time until November 28, when with the army designed by General Grant for the capture of Vicksburg we moved south, and on the 1st of December passed through Holly Springs and camped near Waterford, at which place we were left as garrison, with the additional duty of guarding the railroad to the Tallahatchie River. Companies B, H, I, G, E and K being placed on the railroad with orders to fortify and protect bridges.

We were here attacked by the scourge of the army measles, from which we lost a large number of men, who either died or had to be discharged. We remained at Waterford until the 31st of December, when the Regiment moved by rail to Jackson, Tenn., Company G taking the wagon train. At Jackson we were assigned to the Second Brigade of the Second Division of the Sixteenth Army Corps, Colonel Dunham commanding Brigade. Drill and usual camp duties filled up our time until the 10th of March, 1863, when we were moved by rail to Lagrange and assigned to the Second Brigade, First Division, Sixteenth Army Corps. The Brigade consisted of the Sixth Iowa, Fortieth Illinois, Forty-sixth Ohio, Fifteenth Michigan and One Hundred and Third Illinois—commanded by Colonel C. C. Wolcott of the Forty-sixth Ohio. These regiments (with the exception of the Fifteenth Michigan, which was afterwards transferred to to the Second Division of the Fifteenth Corps) and with the addition of other regiments from time to time, constituted the Second Brigade of the old Fourth Division, and when it was broken up at Atlanta in September, 1864, was the Second Brigade of the First Division, Fifteenth Army Corps, until they were mustered out at Louisville, Ky., in 1865.

We remained at Lagrange, following the regular duties of camp, picket and scout until the "Grierson Raid" was arranged. The 17th April, with the garrison of the post under General W. Sooy Smith, left Lagrange, striking south to Holly Springs and Waterford, turning to the right until we arrived at Colliersville on the M. & C. R. R.; thence back to Lagrange. We were gone nine days. Marched one hundred and seventy-five miles on three days' rations.

About the 1st of May Companies A and F were sent to a small station on Porter's Creek, eight or ten miles east of Grand Junction. While here, Captain Bishop in command, assisted by some natives, captured the notorious guerrila chief, known as Colonel Sol. Street, with almost his entire command, some twenty-five or thirty.

The 2d of June the entire Regiment was placed on the M. & C. R. R. at different points. The 5th we received orders to go to Memphis. Arrived the 6th and placed on transports the 8th, started down the river, arriving at Snyder's Bluff, on the Yazoo, the evening of the 13th and assisted to fortify the Bluffs. We were here attached to the Ninth Corps, Major General J. G. Parks commanding. The 23d we marched out to Oak Ridge, near Black River and again fortified, thus guarding the rear approaches to Vicksburg.

July 4th our part of the army, under command of General Sherman, was ordered to advance to Black River and be ready to cross. We arrived at Black River the night of the 4th. The One Hundred and Third was chosen to force the passage of the river, here four to six rods wide, and from four to ten feet deep. Fortunately the order was revoked and the next morning the enemy was gone. We crossed the river and were en route for Jackson. The 11th we arrived in front of Jackson. On the 16th General Johnson quietly evacuated and we took possession. During the siege and march we suffered greatly from want of water. There being no wells and the cisterns soon giving out, we were forced to use the water collected in pools, in nearly all of which General Johnson had caused to be killed an ox or a mule, so that to use the water was victuals as well as drink.

The 24th, our Division having been assigned to the Fifteenth Corps, as the Fourth Division, we started back to Black River, which we crossed about the 27th, and went into Camp Sherman, having suffered most terribly while on the road from the heat and want of water.

We remained here, drilling and doing a great deal of private foraging, the fruits of which aided materially in preserving the health of the Regiment which, now that active service was over, suffered severely. At one time there were but two commissioned officers fit for duty in the Regiment. While here Company F was on detached duty with the Division Commissary. September 28th we received marching orders, and the next day the Fifteenth Corps was on the road and arrived at Vicksburg, taking transports for the North as fast as they could be furnished.

The One Hundred and Third arrived at Memphis on the 11th, at 9 A. M., drew new arms, (we had heretofore been armed with old fashioned "69" Harper's Ferry muskets,) and at 11:20 were marching out of Memphis to the tune of "The Girl I Left Behind Me."

We arrived at Iuka about the 20th, having made two considerable detours from the direct line of march from Memphis. Here we received pay, transferred some men to the Invalid Corps, refitted the command, and on the 27th crossed the Tennessee River at Eastport, arriving at Florence the 29th, and began fortifying the place.

The 3d of November we again moved out, striking the N. & C. R. R. at Cowan about the 12th, following the railroad to Stavenson and Bridgeport, where we arrived about the 18th.

An attempt had been made by General Corse, commanding, to mount the Brigade, and enough horses had been picked up to mount the Fifteenth Michigan, and two companies—C and G—of the One Hundred and Third, who were then detached from, and did not rejoin the Regiment until the last of December, at Scottsboro, Ala.

On the 20th we left Bridgeport, and crossing Sand Ridge moved southeast so as to strike Trenton, near which we camped the night of the 21st. After building numerous and extensive fires to mislead the enemy, about midnight we quietly withdrew, marching towards Chattanooga, arrived at Wauhatchie the afternoon of the 22d, crossed the Tennessee at Brown's Ferry, and moved up back of the hills near to the place where Sherman's army subsequently crossed.

The morning of the 24th, with our Division, we crossed the river on the pontoon bridge and began the attack on the north end of Missionary Ridge. By 3 P. M. we had assisted to take the first of the hills, which we securely fortified, and at night drew up by hand the guns of Richardson's First Missouri Battery and placed them in position.

The next hill, the one through which the tunnel passes, was the strong point of the Confederate right, and was accordingly strongly fortified. On the 25th our Brigade charged these works, and had it been possible, would have taken the point. Captain Walsh, of Company B, was killed within fifty feet of the rebel works, as were a number of men. After doing all that could be done General Corse ordered us to retire, which we did (part way down the hill) and fortified, expecting to try it again soon. In the meantime the rebel left and center had been crushed, which relieved us of further serious fighting. The eight companies at the beginning of the engagement mustered 237 men, of this number, one commissioned officer, Captain Walsh, and 19 enlisted men, were killed on the field, and 68 wounded, 5 or 6 of whom died of their wounds.

After the engagement we followed Bragg for nearly two days and then went to the relief of Burnside at Knoxville. Arriving within 20 miles of Knoxville, we learned that General Longstreet had raised the siege and "fled to the mountains."

Having rested, we set out on our return to Chattanooga, which place we passed through about the 16th of December, arriving at Bridgeport the 19th, many of the men being literally barefooted.

Being newly clothed and paid the 24th, we marchad to Stevenson, Ala., where we remained over Christmas. The next day we started for Scottsboro, Ala., but a heavy rain setting in we did not reach that place until the 28th.

In 91 days since we had left Vicksburg we had been transported 500 miles, marched over 1100 and participated in one of the most glorious victories of the war.

While in Scottsboro, nominally in winter quarters, few days passed on which we were not called out for forage or scout.

Companies C and G returned to the Regiment, and Company F was again detailed to the commissary department.

About the 8th of February, 1864, we were ordered to report at Cleveland, Tenn., which we did on the 14th. Here we were attached to a Provisional Brigade composed of nine regiments drawn like ourselves from the Fifteenth Corps, Colonel Dickerman, of the One Hundred and Third, being in command.

On the 23d we left Cleveland, Division commanded by General Chas. Cruft, and marched to Catoosa Springs that night. Here we joined General Palmer, commandining this detachment of the army.

The 24th we occupied the valley west of Tunnel Hill. During the night of the 24th moved to within three miles of Buzzard Roost Gap. The next morning formed the advance line and moved forward to wake up the enemy, which being accomplished, we were placed in reserve. There was little time during the day, however, when more than three companies of the entire nine regiments were in reserve.

At night General Palmer, finding the object of the trip accomplished, ordered us to return to the position of the night before. The object of the movement was to prevent the rebels sending re-inforcements to their army in Mississippi, while Sherman was making his Meridian Campaign.

The 26th we returned to Catoosa Springs, and the next day to Cleveland. We remained at Cleveland for a few days, then marched back to Scottsboro, where we arrived about the 10th of March. Being properly refitted and reviewed, the 1st of May we set out for Chattanooga, where we arrived the 3d, and began the glorious Atlanta Campaign. The 5th we moved south, by the way of Crawfish Springs and Gordon's Mills, over a part of the battle ground of Chickamauga, through Villanow to the entrance of Snake Creek Gap, fourteen miles southwest of Dalton. By the 14th we were in sight of Resaca, where we lost one man killed and several wounded, among the latter, Major Willison.

The 16th the enemy evacuated. We followed as fast as circumstances would permit through Adairsville and Calhoun, arriving at Kingston the 20th. The 23d we struck southwest to Van Wert, passing over the "Dug-down" Mountains, and camped on Pumpkin Vine Creek, five miles southwest of Dallas, the night of the 25th. The 26th we moved through Dallas, taking a position about a half mile southwest of town, having quite a lively skirmish, but with no loss to our Regiment. At night, works were built. The 27th, early, we were attacked, but the attack was easily repulsed.

Here Captain Smith, of Company K, while advancing the skirmish line, with the help of two men, captured a rebel outpost and made twenty-one prisoners.

Our loss this day was two killed and thirty-five wounded. On the afternoon of the 28th General Hardee, with a large force, made several unsuccessful attacks on our Brigade. The loss of the Regiment in this engagement was small in numbers but seemingly irrepairable, four being taken prisoners and eleven wounded, among the latter was Colonel W. A. Dickerman, who received a mortal wound near the close of the engagement. He died at 2 o'clock on the morning of the 3th. His loss was severely felt by his command, and it is believed that what reputation the Regiment had for discipline and prompt action when called upon, was largely due to him.

The night of the 1st of June the army moved by the left flank occupying Allatoona Pass, the enemy falling back, his right resting on Kenesaw and his left on Lost Mountain. The night of the 2d we rested at Ackworth. The 6th, made a reconnoissance to and beyond Big Shanty and returned. The 7th we advanced to Big Shanty with the army, and about this time were in reserve for three days, this being all the time that we were not in the actual front during the entire Atlanta Campaign.

The 15th of June we moved to the extreme left of our army, and, by a rapid movement of our Brigade, captured some 470 of the enemy, the loss of the Regiment being four killed and seventeen corporals and one sergeant wounded. This was considered a bad day for Chevrons.

June 27th our Brigade, as usual, was chosen from the Fifteenth Corps to assault the impregnable Kenesaw. The attack was unsuccessful. Of twelve officers of the Regiment who went into the action, three were killed; Lieutenant Bailey of Company F, Lieutenants Montgomery and Branson of Company I, and foor wounded, among the latter Lieutenant-Colonel Wright, commanding the Regiment. Colonel Wright was serving on the Division Staff at the time, but, as the Regiment was without a field officer, he joined it and took command. Of the enlisted men nineteen were killed, the wounded unknown.

The morning of July 4th we occupied Marietta, detaching a party to bury our dead of the 27th. That duty being accomplished, we moved to the extreme right of the army, near Nickajack Creek, where we remained until about the middle of the month, when, with the Army of the Tennessee, we moved to the extreme left, crossed the Chatahoochie near Roswell, and moved south to Decatur, finally swinging into line around Atlanta. On the 22d, when we were within one mile of the city, Gen. Hood attacked us with great skill and vigor, the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Corps being partially driven back, with the exception of the Brigade on the extreme right of the Seventeenth, our Regiment being the left Regiment of the Fifteenth Corps, and, joining the Seventeenth Corps, changed from front to rear and back again, until the order had been seven times repeated, each time repelling the attack made on the position. During the day we captured some two or three hundred prisoners. Being partially protected by works our loss was not severe, Lieutenant Blair, of Company D, and three men being killed.

On the evening and night of the 27th we were transferred to the extreme right of the army, where, on the 28th, while prolonging the line, we were again attacked by General Hood, who threw line after line on our unprotected front, but without effect; our loss was 4 killed.

Remaining in line until the night of the 25th of August we left our works, and passing by the Confederate left, struck the A. & W. R. R. near Newman Station, destroyed some miles of track, then passed on to the M. & A. R.R., which we struck near Jonesboro on the night of September 1. Here we attacked General Hood, who had just retreated from Atlanta, and as usual defeated him.

On the 2d, Captain George Wilkinson, of Company B, A.A.A.G. of the Division, received a wound, from which he died the 23d. He was one of the best loved and most respected officers in the Regiment.

On the 5th of September we returned to and camped at East Point, six miles southwest of Atlanta, and took the first night's rest since the 11th of May without the sound of a rebel gun to lull us to sleep. We had been under fire all that time, and in the front except three days. We had been in every engagement that the Brigade, Division or Corps had in any way been engaged, and were as ragged as any Regiment in the army. We were immediately clothed and refitted for business, in the meantime building a few miles of field works just to keep our hands in.

To a detail of the Regiment in the form of a Company, in connection with a Company of the 97th Indiana, was given the duty of guarding the neutral ground, on the part of our army, while prisoners were being exchanged and citizens were being sent south by General Sherman.

The Fourth Division of the Corps was here broken up and the Second Brigade was assigned to the First Division, General Charles Wood commanding.

September 27th, truce being concluded, General Hood having passed to our rear and destroyed the railroad, we followed in his wake as far as Gaylesville, Ala. Returned to Smyrna Camp Ground about the 1st of November, when we were again paid off and refitted. The 15th we passed through the burning city of Atlanta and camped near our old position. The morning of the 16th of November saw us enroute "to the sea."

The 22d the Second Brigade, numbering 1,819 muskets, with two pieces of artillery, went to the support of a Division of Cavalry near Griswoldsville, a town ten miles east of Macon. We drove the enemy into and beyond the town, then retired a short distance. Here we were soon attacked by the enemy 9,000 strong according to their own report, whom we severely defeated, he losing in killed, wounded and captured more than the number of our entire Brigade. Our loss was three killed and two died of wounds; the loss of the Brigade was 92 killed and wounded.

The morning of December 9 we crossed the Ogeechie River and by night the investment of Savannah was completed. The 13th, Fort McAlister being captured, our "Cracker Line" was open. After a week of desultory fighting the army evacuated and the 21st we marched into Savannah and occupied one of the numerous and beautiful parks, for which the city is so justly celebrated, as city guard.

The Regiment participated in the campaign of the Carolinas, leaving Savannah about the middle of January, 1865, going to Beaufort S. C., via Thunder Bolt, where we remained until the 27th. Crossed Broad River and on the 28th and 29th were on a reconnaisance toward Charleston. Participated in all the skirmishes and battles in which the First Division of the Fifteenth Corps was engaged.

Arrived at Goldsboro, N. C., the 22d of March and at Raleigh April 14th.

The 30th of April the Regimeni left Raleigh en route for Washington, passing through Richmond on the 9th or 10th of May, and arrived at Alexandria the 19th or 20th. Being partially refitted, we participated in the Grand Review at Washington on the 24th of May, and camped three or four miles north of the city.

Not being included in the list of the regiments to be mustered out, on the 31st of May we marched to the freight depot of the B. and O. R. R., whose cars had been prepared for us, and started for Louisville, Ky., via Parkersburg, W. Va., where we took boats down the Ohio River, arriving the afternoon of the 4th of June at Louisville, and camping on Bear Grass Creek.

The 14th of June the order for our muster out was received per telegraph, and the 21st, the necessary rolls having been prepared, we were mustered out of the service of the United States by Major Dickey, U. S. A.—having been in the service two years, eight months and twenty days. In that time we had seen service in all the Confederate States but two (Texas and Florida), had been engaged in 24 battles, besides the sieges of Vicksburg, Jackson, Atlanta and Savannah, and skirmishes without number. We were ordered to Chicago, where we arrived June 24th, for final pay and discharge, which we received the 9th of July.

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND FOURTH INFANTRY.

This Regiment was organized at Ottawa, in August, 1862, and was composed almost entirely of La Salle county men.

Before being uniformed or armed, they received orders to report at Louisville, Ky., where they remained for some time, and in the organization of General Buell's Army were assigned to General Dumont's Division, and when General Buell commenced his march in pursuit of General Bragg, were on the left of the army, going first to Frankfort, Ky., where they remained until October 26, then marching to Bowling Green, Glasgow, Tompkinsville, and on the 1st of December, reached Hartsville, Tenn., on the Cumberland River. The Brigade was commanded by Colonel Scott, of the Nineteenth Illinois, until they reached Hartsville, when Colonel A. B. Moore, of the One Hundred and Fourth Illinois, was assigned to the command. Lieutenant Colonel Hapeman commanding the Regiment.

The troops at Hartsville consisted of the One Hundred and Fourth Illinois, the One Hundred and Sixth and One Hundred and Eighth Ohio, two companies of cavalry, and two pieces of artillery, about 900 effective men. Three companies of the One Hundred and Fourth Illinois were detached, two being in Gallatin, and one on duty in the village of Hartville.

On the 6th of December, the rebels sent an expedition from Murfreesboro to attack the forces at Hartsville. It consisted of a Brigade of Infantry, of three veteran regiments of Kentucky troops, commanded by General Hanson, all of Morgan's cavalry, commanded by General Basil W. Duke, and a battery of artillery, in all about 3,500 men, all under command of General Morgan. They crossed the Cumberland River between Hartsville and Gallatin, and approached the position held by the Brigade at daylight on the morning of the 7th of December. The Brigade was instantly brought into line, the One Hundred and Fourth Illinois (7 companies) on the left, the One Hundred and 6th and One Hundred and Eighth Ohio on the right. There were no earthworks, and the troops were formed on the top of the hill, the best position they could take. The rebels at once charged our lines, when the One Hundred and Sixth and One Hundred and Eighth Ohio fell back, leaving the One Hundred and Fourth Illinois alone on the line. They repulsed the attack of the infantry and were driving them from the field when Morgan's cavalry, dismounted, and commanded by General Dude, attacked them on the right flank and in rear, and they were completely surrounded, and were obliged to surrender. The battle lasted one hour and fifteen minutes, and the Regiment lost 44 men killed, and about 150 wounded. The Regiment fought bravely in this, their first battle, and had they been properly supported, no doubt would have defeated the rebels. The Regiment was marched to Murfreesboro, and then paroled, with the exception of Lieutenant Colonel Hareman and Major Widmer, who, with eleven other field officers, where held as hostages for General McNeill, who the rebels charged with having had 13 guerrillas shot at Palmyra, Mo. These officers were held by order of General Bragg, in solitary confinement, until the 23d day of April, 1863, when they were exchanged and joined the Regiment at Brentwood, Tenn.

After being paroled, the Regiment marched to Nashville, and were sent from thence to Camp Chase, at Columbus, O., and from there to Camp Douglas, at Chicago, and on being exchanged, in the spring of 1863, were ordered to rejoin the Army of the Cumberland, at Brentwood, Tenn. From Brentwood the Regiment marched to Murfreesboro, and were assigned to the First Brigade, Second Division, Fourteenth Army Corps, the Brigade commanded by General John Beatty. They remained at Murfreesboro until the advance of the army on Tullahoma, when they advanced through Hoover's Gap, skirmishing with the enemy, with slight loss, passing through Manchester, again skirmishing at Elk River, and when General Bragg crossed the Tennessee River they went into camp at Decherd, Tenn., where they remained until August 15, when they marched to Stevenson, Ala., where they remained until the army made the advance which ended in the battle of Chickamauga and the occupation of Chattanooga.

On the 2d day of September, 1863, the movement for the capture of Chattanooga began, the Regiment crossing the Tennessee River at Caperton's Ferry, and the following day crossed Sand Mountain, then entered Lookout Valley, near Trenton, Ga.; and followed the Valley until they reached Johnson's Crook, and on the 7th ascended Lookout Mountain, crossing the mountain at Stephen's Gap, descending into McLemore's Cove.

On the 10th the Regiment moved forward, with Negley's Division, to Davis Cross Roads, and on the following day developed the rebel army, at Dug Gap, in Pigeon Mountain, and after a severe skirmish, with some loss, fell back again to McLemore's Cove, where they remained until the 16th, when the movement towards Chattanooga was commenced. On the night of the 18th the Regiment marched all night, taking a position in front of Crawfish Springs, where they were engaged during the 19th, exposed most of the time to a terrific artillery fire, and suffering a severe loss. On the evening of the 19th they moved to the extreme left of the army, and on the 20th were engaged, suffering a heavy loss, falling back in the evening to Rossville. On the 21st the Regiment remained at Rossville, skirmishing with the enemy, losing several men, and at night fell back to Chattanooga, being the rear guard in the movement, raaching the works at Chattanooga about daylight on the morning of the 22d of September. The loss of the Regiment in the battle of Chickamauga was severe, the Regiment being engaged, besides the two days of the battle, in several hard skirmishes. Remained in Chattanooga during its investment by the rebel army under General Bragg.

In the reorganization of the Fourteenth Army Corps, after the battle of Chickamauga, the Regiment was assigned to the First Brigade, First Division, the Brigade commanded by General W. P. Carlin, and remained in this Brigade until the end of the war. Colonel Moore having resigned on the 9th of September, 1863, Lieutenant Colonel Hapeman commanded the Regiment.

On the 24th of November, 1863, the Regiment was engaged on Lookout Mountain, near the White House, when the First Brigade, First Division, Fourteenth Army Corps, repulsed an attack made by the rebels, about 9 o'clock P. M., to regain possession of the ground.

On the 25th of November, 1863, was engaged in the capture of Missionary Ridge, and captured a number of prisoners. On the 26th, followed the retreating rebels to Grayville, and, on the 27th, to Ringgold, returning from thence to Chattanooga, on the 29th. The men behaved well in all the engagements during this campaign. Remained in and around Chattanooga until the 10th of February, 1864, when it was ordered to Nashville by General Johnson, to get transportation for the Fourteenth Corps. Returned to Chattanooga with the same, on March 15th, 1864, joining the remainder of the Division at Grayville on the 19th. Remained until the 3d of May, when the Regiment went to Ringgold, to prepare for the campaign about to commence against Atlanta.

Commenced the march on the 7th of May, and, on the 9th, was in front of Buzzard's Roost Gap, where the Regiment remained, doing some skirmishing, until the 12th, when it marched to the right, passing Snake Creek Gap. On the 14th, was engaged in the battle of Resaca, losing 1 man killed and 9 wounded. Remained in front, skirmishing, until the 16th, when the Regiment marched to Resaca—the enemy having evacuated the night before. Followed the retreating rebels to Kingston, arriving there on the 19th. Remained there until the 23d, when the Regiment marched to Dallas, arriving there or in that vicinity on the 26th. Remained there, skirmishing, and losing some men, until the 5th of June, when the Regiment moved to the left, in front of Kenesaw Mountain, where it was engaged, skirmishing, nearly all the time, until the 3d of July, when the enemy left the mountain. The command followed them through Marietta, until they made a stand near the railroad bridge across the Chattahoochie River. The Regiment remained here, skirmishing, until July 10, when the rebels fell back across the Chattahoochie. Did not move until the 17th, and, on the 20th, crossed Peach Tree Creek. About 4 o'clock P. M. the enemy attacked the line (connecting with the Twentieth Corps on the left, and no troops on the right), and soon enveloped the right flank, planting their colors near the works. They were repulsed, however, and re-enforcements soon coming up, the Regiment was enabled to hold its ground. The men fought nobly, and the loss was heavy, it being 50—two officers and 14 men killed, one officer and 28 enlisted men wounded and five missing.

On the 22d the command again moved forward, the enemy having left their works in front, and went into Atlanta; but were met by Loring's Division, strongly entrenched, and the command halted and commenced throwing up works. Remained until August 3d, when the Regiment moved to the right three miles, and, on the 6th, were formed on Utoy Creek. On the 7th, was engaged at Utoy Creek, losing one officer and four enlisted men killed and 18 enlisted men wounded. On August 26, marched to the right, towards Jonesboro, and, on September 1, fought the battle of Jonesboro, which gave possession of Atlanta; and, on the 6th, started for Atlanta, arriving there on the 8th.

The campaign, from May 7, when the Regiment left Ringgold, to September 6, when it left Jonesboro, was very severe. The Regiment skirmished nearly all the time with the enemy, and never halted for the night without throwing up works and preparing for an attack. The Regiment was engaged in three battles: Resaca, Peach Tree Creek and Jonesboro. Losses in skirmishing were heavy in killed and wounded.

The Regiment behaved nobly during the whole campaign, especially at Peach Tree Creek, where the right of the Regiment was nearly annihilated, and although the line grew shorter every day the men were in the best of spirits.

The Regiment remained in Atlanta until October 3, when the rebels having crossed the Chattahoochie, and were moving towards Allatoona, the command commenced moving north, and, crossing the Chattahoochie on the 3d, passed through Marietta, reaching Kenesaw Mountain on the 6th, and remaining in that vicinity until the 9th, when the Regiment marched along the railroad to Kingston, reaching there on the 11th. Marched to within three miles of Rome on the 12th; to Calhoun, on the 13th; to Resaca, on the 14th; crossed the Chattogata Mountain, at Red Run Gap, on the 15th; passed through Villenow, LaFayette and Summerville, reaching Galesburg, Ala,, on the 20th, where the Regiment remained until the 28th; then marched, through Rome, to Kingston, to get ready for the campaign to be commenced in a short time.

The Regiment was not engaged with the enemy after it left Atlanta; but the marches were very hard—a great portion of the distance being traveled by night. The men were, also, short of rations until they reached the Summerville Valley, when requisitions were made on the country for supplies.

Remained in Kingston until November 12, when the Regiment marched to Atlanta, arriving there on the 15th, when rations and clothing were issued. On the 16th, commenced the "march to the sea," taking possession of Savannah on the 21st of December. As this was but a succession of marches, and but little opposition was met with until the army reached Savannah, it is deemed unnecessary to detail the march. The Regiment had its share of the hardships, marches, etc., as also the fine foraging which the country passed through afforded.

Remained in Savannah until January 15, when was commenced the march through the Carolinas. This, like the preceding campaign, was a succession of marches—the bad roads impeding more than the rebels. It required more troops with the trains, to build corduroy roads, than it did on the skirmish line. The Regiment was engaged in the battle of Bentonville, and had several skirmishes, with small loss.

The command remained at Goldsboro, N. C., fitting up for another campaign, until April 10; then marched to Raleigh, where the Regiment remained until the surrender of Johnston's Army.

The Regiment commenced the march from Raleigh to Washington on April 30, arriving there on May 19, and participating in the Grand Review on the 24th of May.

Made muster-out rolls and were mustered out on the 6th day of June. On the 8th, the Regiment left Washington for Chicago, arriving there on the 10th. Were paid off and the men returned to their homes.

The Regiment was engaged in the battles of Hartsville, Chickamauga, Lookout Mountain, Mission Ridge, Resaca, Peach Tree Creek, Utoy Creek, Jonesboro and Bentonville, besides a great many skirmishes, in which they lost men.

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTH INFANTRY.

The One Hundred and Fifth Regiment Illinois Infantry Volunteers was mustered into the service of the United States September 2, 1862.

On the 8th moved to Camp Douglas. On the 30th left Camp Douglas for Louisville, Ky., arriving on the 2d of October, and, reporting to General Dumont, was attached to his Division, Brigadier General W. T. Ward's Brigade. On the 3d moved in the direction of Frankfort; arrived on the 9th after a severe march. Were engaged in guard and picket duty, with occasional slight skirmishing with the enemy. While at Frankfort, made a raid to Lawrenceburg and returned On the 26th, moved, en route to Bowling Green, arriving on the 4th of November, and remaining one week, was ordered to Scottsville. November 25, moved to Gallatin, Tenn.; December 11, moved to South Tunnel; February 1, 1863, returned to Gallatin, remaining till the 1st day of June, 1863, when it moved to Lavergne. From thence to Murfreesboro, Tenn., returning to Lavergne the last of July. Moved to Nashville August 19. Was quartered in Fort Negley, doing guard duty in it and the city of Nashville. Exchanged the Austrian musket, with which the Regiment had been armed, for the Springrifle musket. Meanwhile it was attached to the Eleventh Army Corps, Major General O. O. Howard commanding.

On the 24th day of February, 1864, it took the line of march in the direction of Chattanooga, Tenn. On the — day of March it arrived at Wauhatchie, at which place it remained until the 2d day of May, being brigaded with the One hundred and Second and one Hundred and Twenty-ninth Illinois, Seventieth Indiana and Seventh-ninth Ohio, with which it remained during the war. In the meantime the Eleventh and Twelfth Army Corps were consolidated under the name of the Twentieth Army Corps, Major General Joseph Hooker commanding.

May 2, moved to Gordon's Mills. May 6, marched to Leet's farm; thence to Taylor's Ridge on the 7th. May 10, moved to Snake Creek Gap. May 12, to Sugar Valley. May 13, moved in the direction of Resaca, Ga., skirmishing that evening and the next day. The morning of the 15th, moved with the Corps to the extreme left of the lines, immediately upon its arrival taking part in a charge upon the enemy's works, which were carried, losing several men in the engagement. On the 16th, pursued the retreating enemy, arriving at Calhoun on the 17th. On the 18th, moved to near Cassville. On the 19th the One Hundred and Fifth being in advance, skirmished with the rear guard of the enemy, driving them at every point. Remained near Kingston until the 23d, when ordered forward, crossing the Etowah River. 24th, moved to Burnt Hickory. On the 25th, continuing its march towards Dallas, Ga., encountering the enemy, having a brisk engagement till dark, the casualties numbering fifteen, including two commissioned officers.

From this time until the first of June the Regiment was engaged in advancing the line, building and strengthening the works and skirmishing, losing 16 men.

On the first of June moved to the extreme left with the Twentieth Corps. On the 2d the One Hundred and Fifth was ordered out as flankers, in which position it lost a most excellent officer, Surgeon Horace S. Potter, being killed by a shell. On the 3d, moved around and beyond the enemy's right, encamping near Ackworth, Georgia. Here it remained until the 6th, when it moved forward and took position near Golgotha Church, in line of battle, throwing up entrenchments and remaining until the 15th, when it again moved forward, encountering the enemy behind breastworks. A steady fire was kept up until dark. That night and the next day (the 16th) was occupied in strengthening the position, by erecting breastworks, being exposed to the fire of the enemy. Lost 19 men during the two days. The night of the 16th, the enemy retreated. On the 17th, 18th, 19th and 20th, followed the retreating enemy, with slight skirmishing, at intervals. 21st, severe skirmish firing, 22d, moved forward about a mile, in close proximity to the enemy's works, exposed to their fire—losing 11 men. The enemy evacuated his position during the night of July 2. On the 3d, moved in the direction of Marietta, Ga. The Brigade to which the One Hundred and Fifth was attached being the advance, skirmished with the enemy—losing 1 man killed and 2 wounded. Camped about four miles from Marietta, Ga., in plain view of a portion of the rebel army. On the evening of the 4th, continued the march in the direction of the Chattahoochie River,camping within two miles of that stream, on the north side, the night of the 6th. Remained there until the 17th, when it crossed the river and encamped until the afternoon of the 18th. Moved forward about five miles and rested till the morning of the 20th. Crossed Peach Tree Creek and came upon the enemy. A line of battle was formed—a charge of the enemy was repulsed in the afternoon, and several prisoners captured; also, the colors of the Twelth Louisana. 21st, was occupied in burrying tne dead of both sides, and collecting and turning over ordnance and other property. On the 22d, moved forward about three miles, where the enemy was again encountered, posted behind the defences of Atlanta. Intrenchments were immediately thrown up. Remained in this position until the 26th, when relieved and placed on reserve. 29th, moved six miles to the right of the lines. Making the position secure by throwing up works, remained until the 2d day of August. Returned to the left and took position,which was fortified and strenthened Constant skirmishing and artillery firing was kept up until the night of the 25th of August, when ordered to fall back to the Chattahoochie River. Here it remained until the 27th when it took position on the north side of that stream, doing picket and guard duty.

The 2d day of September, the city of Atlanta surrendered. The Regiment remained in the vicinity of Atlanta until the 15th of November, when the "grand march to the sea" was began. The One Hundred and Fifth accompying the expedition, bore its full share of the trials and hardships incident thereto. Passing on the route, Decatur, Sithonia, Social Circle,Rutledge and Madison,at which last named place it arrived on the 19th of November. From thence, marching southward to the city of Milledgeville, the capital of Georgia, arriving on the 22d, and remaining until the 24th. Thence to the north of the Mississippi and Georgia Central railroad. Passing through Sandersville, Davisboro, and Louisville—(the One Hundred and Fifth and part of the One Hundred and Second routing a body of rebel cavalry between the last two named places) reaching Milan on December 3d. Continuing the march towards Savannah, passing through Springfield on the 7th, having a slight skirmish with guarrillas, arrived in the vicinity of Savannah on the 10th. The One Hundred and Fifth being the advance that day, had a brisk skirmish with the enemy's pickets, driving them within the defense of the city. Participated in the siege of Savannah. That city was evacuated on the night of the 20th of December. On the 31st of December, 1864, and January 1, 1865, was occupied in crossing the Savannah River—losing one man by a musket shot from the enemy—moved five miles and encamped until the 4th of January. Marched north to Hardee's farm, and again encamped, remaining until the 17th with slight skirmishing at intervals. Moved to Hardeeville, remaining there until the 29th, when it started on the campaign of the Carolinas.

Moving northward, nothing of interest occurred until the 2d day of February, when the One Hundred and Fifth, being in advance, encountered the enemy near Lawtonville strongly posted behind barricades. It immediately charged the enemy, driving them from their position, through the town—losing 8 men in the engagement.

Continued the march on the 3d, 4th, 5th 6th and 7th, when the One Hundred and Fifth again had the advance; had some slight skirmishing with Wade Hampton's cavalry. 8th, 9th and 10th was engaged in tearing up railroad between Graham Station and Williston. From thence, crossed the South and North Edisto Rivers, on the road to Columbia, arriving opposite that city on the 16th, after a very disagreeable march through swamps and marshes. Not being able to cross the Congaree at that point, moved up the river, and crossed the Broad and Saluda Rivers, which unite and form the Congaree. Marching northward, arrived at Winnsboro on the 21st. On the 22d, the Regiment, again in the advance had some skirmishing with Butler's rebel cavalry, and crossed the Wateree River. Reached Hanging Rock on the 27th, rested one day; 29th, moved northward, arriving at Chesterfield, March 3d; at Cheraw, March 6th. Crossed Great Pedee and Lumber Rivers, and arrived at Fayetteville, North Carolina, on the 11th. Resting three days, 15th, moved in the direction of Raleigh, North Carolina, some ten miles, where it encountered the enemy, heavily entrenched, near Averysboro. Then, on the 16th, followed the battle of Averysboro—the enemy being driven from their position. The One Hundred and Fifth lost 6 killed and 16 wounded.

On the 19th, 20th and 21st, took part in the engagement near Bentonville. The enemy evacuated that place on the night of the 21st. Arrived at Goldsboro on the 24th. Thus ended the Campaign of the Carolinas.

Remained at Goldsboro until April 10th, 1865. Continued the march toward Raleigh arriving at Smithfield on the 11th, and at Raleigh on the 13th, encountering but little opposition from the enemy. Resting until the 25th, moved out some fourteen miles on the Holly Springs road, in the direction of General Johnston's army. Encamped during the 26th and 27th. In the meantime, General Johnston surrendered. On the 28th, returned to Raleigh and immediately began making preparations for the homeward march.

On the 30th left Raleigh en route to Washington City via Richmond, passing through the latter city on the 11th of May. Arrived in the vicinity of Alexandria, Virginia, on the 19th. Took part in the grand review at Washington, on the 24th, where the Regiment received a compliment for their movements in the manual of arms, and their military appearance.

Remained in the vicinity of Washington until the 7th of June, when the Regiment was mustered out of the service, and started, by rail, for Chicago, Illinois, where it arrived on the 10th.

Remained at Camp Fry, until the 17th, when paid off and disbanded.
